Refuses Extension Of Pact Comment

Wait on Selassie.

Calls It 'Shameful.'

The democracies of Europe "have no greater consideration for treaties and national integrity than the dictators," Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, charged yesterday.

The ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was severe in criticism of Britain and France for their efforts at Geneva to bring about League of Nations recognition of Italy's seizure of Ethiopia. "A shameless betrayal," he called their activities.

Foreign affairs and national defense were given a large measure of the attention of official circles here.

President Roosevelt arranged for a conference today with Army, Naval and legal experts on the controversial matter of selling helium to Germany. The President thereby takes personal charge of the dispute that has raged, with Secretary of the Interior Ickes holding up the sale.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed also that the War Department and the Federal Power Commission are engaged in a study of methods of linking up electric power systems, in time of war, to prevent aerial raiders from disrupting industry and crippling cities.

Secretary of State Hull hoped to complete and send to the Senate today the department's reply to a request for its observations and attitude on the Nye resolution to permit sale of arms to government forces in Spain.

Britain, France Scored.

Of activities at Geneva, Senator Borah said:

"In view of the shameless betrayal of a small nation at Geneva yesterday and today it seems that we ought to cease trying to mislead the American people by indicating that the democracies of Europe have any greater consideration for treaties and national integrity than the dictators.

"Never was a more solemn obligation entered into than that between Ethiopia with Great Britain and France. These democracies now not only propose to betray Ethiopia but are seeking to have all other nations join them.

"What is the difference between seizing a nation and indorsing the seizure? Or what is the difference between the seizing of Austria by Hitler and the betrayal of Ethiopia by Britain and France?

Silent on Nye Resolution.

"It is a system that prevails and it covers the democracies and the dictatorships of Europe alike."

At his press conference yesterday Mr. Roosevelt was told his statement of April 19 regarding the Italo-British accord was being mentioned in the House of Commons and at the League meeting, and he was asked to amplify it. He suggested that it be re-read. When a reporter asked if he meant his Chicago speech regarding "quarantining" aggressors he recommended that it be re-read also, remarking that it had been widely misquoted.

In his April 18 statement, the President made it clear he was not

House Group Asks Inquiry On Nazi Bunds

By the Associated Press.

A proposed Congressional inquiry that may focus attention on the German-American bund and any Nazi, Facist or Communist activities in the United States won the backing of the influential House Rules Committee yesterday.

The committee indorsed an investigation resolution after hearing Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, of the Immigration Committee, assert there would be "riots and blodshed" unless Congress acted.

The measure introduced by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, would create a seven-man House committee to determine the extent, character and objectives of "un-American propaganda activities" in the United States, whether of foreign, or domestic origin.

It makes no mention of Nazi, Facist or Communist organizations, but committeemen made it plain it was aimed in their direction.

Dickstein said money from Germany is financing Nazi organizations in America and has paid for 31 Nazi camps. He added that Nazis have sent a million war draft blanks to men of German blood in the United States and that "20 big industries in this country have contributed money to the Nazi cause because they have interests in Germany."

"There is going to be another riot next week," the New Yorker said. "They are going to have a parade of 100,000 Nazis opening up Camp Seigfried, on Long Island."

"I favor setting up an investigation that would run them out of the country," remarked Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia.

51 Austrian Jews, Expelled by Nazis, Marooned on Boat

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, May 10 (AP).—The plight of 51 Austrian Jews expelled by Nazis and given temporary haven on a French tugboat, became critical today. They have nowhere to go.

Their last hope of gaining admittance to Czechoslovakia, a hope to which they had clung anxiously, was dashed when the Prague government rejected their application to enter Czech territory.

The refugees, expelled from Burgenland, found a first haven on the estate of Prince Elemer Lonyay at the point where Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia meet.

On April 20 they were placed aboard the French tugboat Quenia and the vessel was permitted to lie at anchor in the Danube River, in Hungarian waters. Hungary and France denied the Jews admission.

U.S. Warship Sped to China Danger Zone

Three British Craft Also Standing by Citizens on Amoy Isle.

By the United Press.

Hongkong (Wednesday), May 11. Three British warships and the Asheville, 1,270-ton American gunboat, were reported standing off Amoy today to protect 250 Occidentals, including 80 Americans, who were endangered by fighting between Japanese and Chinese forces.

Most of the foreigners were believed safe in the International Settlement of Kulangsu Island, off Amoy Island, on which most of the great Fukien Province port of Amoy, a city of 250,000, is located.

Japanese bluejackets were landed in the Chinese city yesterday following a terrific aerial and naval bombardment. The foreign warships were called by radio after scores of Chinese had been killed and hundreds wounded. United States Consul Leland C. Altaffer asked for aid when it became apparent there was to be widespread fighting.

Attack Begins at Dawn.

The attack on Amoy Island began at dawn yesterday and by nightfall much of the city, which has a normal population of about 250,000, was in flames. Japanese warships hurled scores of high explosive shells into the military areas and were followed by 18 bombing planes which dropped more than 200 bombs.

Amoy University was bombed and partly destroyed "because Chinese defenses had been constructed on the campus."

The Japanese said no military action would be taken in the foreign quarters "as long as Chinese are prohibited from using foreign residences or property for any kind of anti-Japanese activity."

They said Amoy long had been "a base of the anti-Japanese movement and a port through which munitions imports were relayed to central China."

Thousands Flee to Hills.

There was heavy fighting but the Chinese garrison gradually was forced back as the Japanese fire was centered on the Island fortifications.

Two theories were advanced for occupation of the port, which lies just opposite the Japanese island of Formosa from which it is separated by the Formosa Strait:

That Japan hopes to prevent the big army of Kwangsi Province soldiers, which has been guarding Amoy, from being transferred to the great battle areas north of the Yangtze River, and believes that a demonstration at Amoy will result in recall of South China armies already started northward.

That the Japanese intend to establish a base at Amoy from which army divisions from Formosa can strike inland for a drive on south China communications as part of a great campaign designed to end in the occupation of China's provisional capital in Hankow.

Naval authorities understood that 500,000 Kwangsi troops, heretofore held in reserve to protect South China, were en route north to engage in the Lung-Hai battle. They doubted that these forces would be recalled.

Admiral Bows To Lieutenant He 'Slighted'

Retracts Statement 'Passed Over' Officers Are 'of Very Little Use.'

By the Associated Press.

A 40-year-old Navy lieutenant who has been in the same service grade nearly 16 years, took issue with a rear admiral before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee yesterday and won his point.

ADM. ANDREWS.

Lieut. William J. Slattery, in charge of teaching midshipmen at Annapolis about naval flying, protested a statement by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, that officers who had been "passed over" for promotions were of "no use to the Navy."

"I admit we're discontented," said Slattery, "but I take issue that we are not any use."

Admiral Andrews, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Navigation, replying to a question by Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, about the value of "passed-over" naval officers, had said:

"They are very little use. They are discontented."

The admiral broke in on Lieut. Slattery's stout defense of "passed-over" officers to say he had "revised my remark" and had a very high regard for Lieut. Slattery.

LIEUT. SLATTERY.

"In that case I withdraw all my remarks," the lieutenant said quickly. "My children may read this record some day," he added. "I didn't want them to think I was of no use."

Slattery had detailed his personal failure to win promotion by the selection board despite commendations from numerous admirals and top rank in service school training.

"I also know of some officers who have not been passed over, who are of little use to the Navy," he said at one point. "Some of them were selected even with two or three courts-martial on their records."

The girl rallied from the shock of the operation. Physicians reported she was "bright and alert" and took her formula feedings on schedule.

Mrs. Estelle Colan reversed her decision not to visit Helaine at the hospital.

White House Backs Ihlder Housing Plan

President Roosevelt settled a behind-the-scenes controversy yesterday and assured Washington an enlarged slum-clearance and low-rent housing program. Possible result is a $12,000,000 program.

After a half-hour conference with John Ihlder, executive officer of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, the President announced approval of Ihlder's proposed amendments to the alley dwelling act and the authority's slum reclamation and housing program.

Ihlder is expected to confer today with Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the Budget Bureau, on two amendments to the act.

One amendment will give the ADA authority to borrow money for low-rent houses from the United States Housing Authority. According to some legal opinion the ADA has lacked this authority, although Congress apparently intended the Wagner-Steagall act should provide it.

The other amendment will allow the ADA to acquire land outside squares containing inhabited alleys for low-rent houses. The Alley Dwelling act confined activities of the ADA to squares containing inhabited alleys.

From the way Ihlder smiled after his conference yesterday it was believed the President had assured future allocations of money from Congress to carry on slum clearance work. Prospective loans from the USHA will allow the ADA to construct new low-rent homes.

A controversy of several months between Ihlder and Nathan Straus, administrator of the USHA, broke into the open Saturday when Straus released a letter declaring he was "amazed" and "puzzled" at Ihlder's delay in responding to his proposed amendments. He wrote the delay jeopardized a $10,000,000 building program.

One cause of Ihlder's delay was his pending appointment with the President, from which he emerged yesterday an apparent victor.

In his letter Saturday Straus revealed that the USHA might lend

Roosevelt Seeks $108,000 for FBI In Emergencies

An appropriation of $108,000 for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which recently reduced its force of agents for lack of funds, was asked of Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, said the appropriation was needed to make up a deficit incurred "through unforeseen expenditures in connection with the Ross, Levine and Fried kidnaping cases and other important investigations in addition to regular work of the bureau."

Bell warned that unless emergency funds were made available "the service will be seriously crippled and personnel will have to be drastically curtailed."

Reduction of the force was blamed by FBI officials for the death last week of Agent William R. Ramsey in capturing a bank robber near Danville, Ill.

Roosevelt Abandons Limits On 70,000 Workers' Leaves

Executive Order Permits 13,000 Emergency Employes of U. S. in District to take Vacations After June 30.

Approximately 70,000 emergency employes, 13,000 stationed here, were relieved by President Roosevelt yesterday of the Comptroller General's interpretation of the annual leave and sick-leave rule which should have compelled them to take vacations before June 30, end of the fiscal year.

The President's order amends the regulations to permit emergency employes whose posts technically expire at the close of the fiscal year to accumulate their full leave, as is done by civil service employes—providing they continue on their jobs or are placed on other Federal pay rolls without a break in service.

The new decree amends the President's executive order governing leave, signed March 21 of this year, retroactive to January 1, 1938. A clarification of the interpretation made by the Comptroller General was asked by the Civil Service Commission and the United Federal Workers of America.

The President yesterday wrote Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president, as follows: "I have your letter of April 26, suggesting a modification of the annual leave regulations so as to allow leave to be transferred by emergency employes who are reappointed to their present positions or to other positions without break in service. The matter was also brought to my attention by the Civil Service Commission, and I take pleasure in advising you that I have this date approved executive orders recommended by the commission in amendment of the annual leave and sick regulations to accomplish that purpose."

Meanwhile, the jobs of nearly 2,500 emergency employes in the General Accounting Office depended on the fate of the President's recovery bill launched in the House yesterday. The measure includes a $4,183,225 appropriation for auditing emergency relief expenditures.

Should the recovery bill receive Congressional approval, the G. A. O. employes whose jobs were expected to end June 30 will be retained.

Labor Board Loses 2d Case In U. S. Courts

'Decision Tends to Promote Discord,' Judges Rule in Kentucky.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday lost the second decision in successive days in litigation before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Covington, Ky.

The court yesterday held that a board decision against the Thompson Products Co., of Cleveland, a motor accessories concern, "tends to destroy the purpose of the labor relations act and to promote discord among employers and employes, instead of harmonious and joint discussion of their difficulties."

On the previous day the court had refused the board permission to withdraw its case against the Ford Motor Co., in order to alter procedure to comply with a recent Supreme Court decision.

Manufacturers Protest.

The circuit court yesterday refused the board an enforcement order against the Thompson company, holding the board's findings were "not sustained by substantial evidence," an Associated Press dispatch said. The board last August ordered the company to reinstate three employes and cease reputed opposition to the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, charged that John L. Lewis' C. I. O. has an "undercover man" on the labor board's staff, and proposed a Congressional investigation of the board.

James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, opposed before the House Judiciary Committee a proposal that Government contracts be withheld from firms or contractors which the board had held were violating the labor relations act.

California Story Cited.

"It has been frequently charged," Hoffman said in a speech inserted in the Congressional Record, "and indeed it is not seriously denied, that C. I. O. organizers and representatives assist agents of the board in procuring witnesses, obtaining testimony, conducting hearings."

He placed in the Record what he said was a copy of a California edition of the United Automobile Worker announcing a board decis-

Patients Shift In Rehousing At Gallinger

Main Purpose Is to Move Children Out of 90-Year-Old Ward.

Probably without local precedent in the number and variety of patients involved, a rehousing program was well under way yesterday at Gallinger Hospital, its main purpose to move children out of the 90-year-old juvenile ward.

A quadruple shift, when completed, will bring about the following changes:

Conversion of the second floor of the psychopathic administration building into a new children's ward.

Removal of the maternity cases, which formerly occupied those quarters, to the obstetrical department in the main building.

Transfer of male convalescents from their present annex to the renovated structure now used as the children's ward.

Alteration of the convalescent annex, which years ago served as a smallpox hospital, for utilization as an eye, ear, nose and throat department.

"We believe the proposed changes will benefit the general needs of the hospital, not only the children," commented Health Officer George C. Ruhland. "The shifting is not ideal from every aspect but for one thing, it will take child patients out of the old building."

A similar view was expressed by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger, though it was learned that officials and medical personnel are not without misgivings about housing children in a unit adjacent to psychopathic wards.

"Everyone recognizes that this is only a temporary expedient, a

House Battles Over Jobs for 4 Million Idle Added to Roll

Republicans Hold First Caucus on Bill for $2,519,000,000.

Committee's Data On Jobless Cited

Leaders Plan to Ask Rules Group Action Tomorrow.

By Robert C. Albright.

Amid Democratic insistence that 4,100,000 jobless be speedily put to work and Republican charges of a "profligate" spending policy, the President's $2,519,000,000 recovery bill yesterday was launched in a tumult of House debate.

Leaders planned to drive through the remaining five hours debate on the bill today, and to ask the Rules Committee to supply the necessary rule for the House to act on the sweeping legislative provisions of the bill tomorrow.

Hardly had the rumbling of the first day's debate died away before House Republicans, in their first party conference of the session, bitterly denounced the new relief program as "only another New Deal political aid upon the Treasury of the United States."

Snell Assails I. O. U.'s.

A statement summarizing minority views, released by Republican Leader Snell following the conference, declared "the time has come to abandon the fantastic theory that recovery and security may be purchased with Treasury I. O. U.'s."

"Every consideration of sound policy demands that the Federal Government now turn to measures which will create employment," the statement concluded.

"This restoration may begin only when full confidence is restored in the national credit, and in the integrity of constitutional representative government. The opposite approach of profligate spending, deficits, and debt, is a demonstrated illusion."

Minority Wages Battle.

Aside from independent Democratic earmarking efforts, opposition to the bill as a whole was almost entirely confined to the minority side of the aisle. The leadership forecast little difficulty in passing the bill, virtually in its present form, tomorrow or Friday.

Chairman Woodrum of the House Deficiencies sub-committee, who opened the case for the bill, claimed an actual reduction of $55,575,000 below the $2,575,000,000 budget estimates for direct WPA, PWA and incidental relief appropriations. In addition, he explained the Public Works Administration could use proceeds from securities to make further loans up to $500,000,000.

In rebuttal, Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, claimed the bill "calls for upward of $500,000,000 above the budget estimates."

Favors State Control.

Taber will move to strike out the entire PWA "pump priming" and Federal buildings sections, and to substitute for the $1,250,000,000 WPA appropriation the so-called Bacon amendment, returning administration of relief to the States.

In his defense of the bill, Woodrum was backed by a committee report declaring that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 persons have lost their jobs in private employment since last September.

It declared the primary urgent aim of the program is to "speedily furnish, by direct employment on the site and indirect employment away from the site, work for some of the many millions who are unemployed and destitute or harrassed by the specters that haunt the doorstep of that too large unfortunate group."

The committee estimated the program would provide jobs as follows: 2,800,000 per month under

'Lost' Apaches, Led by Women, Wander Sierras, Clad in Skins

A lost tribe of Apache Indians, whose leaders are women and whose existence hitherto has been believed a myth, won attention from officials of the Indian Affairs Office yesterday.

The officials pondered plans to bring the lost tribe back alive from its animal-like wanderings in the Sierra Madre Mountains, 150 miles below Douglas, Ariz.

They also considered the rescuer's chances of getting back alive. For, although the Indians are mostly feminine they are believed capable of putting up a hard fight with their primitive weapons.

The matters arose when Dr. Helge Instad, Norwegian ethnologist, reported he saw a group of the Indians on a recent expedition into the Sierra Madre range. That proved they are no myth.

It was proved also they are hard to catch—for Dr. Ingstad couldn't get within a 100-yard range of them. Then the figures, apparently females, turned and fled.

Experts at the office believe the lost tribe is a fragment of Geronimo's fierce band of marauders, scourge of the border country from 1881 to 1886.

Completely out of touch with civilization, the tribe retained its primitive mode of life. By now it has degenerated into a wild pack led by women, clad in animal skins, it is believed.

Black Embarrasses Colleagues In Supreme Court, Writer Says

Justice Hugo Black of the Supreme Court of the United States is causing his associates on the bench "acute discomfort and embarrassment" because of his "lack of legal knowledge and experience," according to an article in Harper's magazine, written by Marquis W. Childs, Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Childs' charges were made, he wrote, on the basis of authentic information, and up to last night Black's colleagues had not come to his defense.

The question of legal craftsmanship is the only point of issue, Childs argued in the article, declaring that Black's former Ku Klux affiliations have no relation to the situation. He said that the fact is the "burden (of the court docket) on the experienced members is severe."

He wrote that Black's legal inexperience, his alleged lack of familiarity "with the whole range of the law and the great body of Supreme Court decisions" had forced older members to work at considerable strain to keep the court abreast of its docket.

"Legal knowledge and experience," such as cited in the magazine article, are not requirements for appointment to the Supreme Court.

Childs said the discomfort of the other justices was not occasioned

Utility Pledge To Aid Praised By Roosevelt

14 Holding Firms Appoint Group to See SEC on 'Death Sentence.'

By Sidney Olson.

The latest move toward closer harmony between the New Deal and big business—a pledge of co-operation by 14 utility holding companies with the Securities and Exchange Commission—drew an expression of pleasure from President Roosevelt yesterday.

At his press conference the Chief Executive said that, while he had not been informed of the action, he hoped it was true.

The 14 utilities, all major companies, had sent a letter yesterday to S. E. C. Chairman William O. Douglas, pledging their co-operation in working out programs of compliance with the "death sentence" clause of the 1935 public utility holding company act.

Conference Group Named.

The companies concluded the joint letter with the paragraph.

"We have been requested to assure you (Douglas) of the desire of those present at this meeting to co-operate with the commission in endeavoring to bring about sound and constructive solutions of the problems confronting these companies."

The 14 firms created a committee of five executives to confer with the SEC here in terms of mutual co-operation over the two major subsections, E and B, of the "death sentence" clause of the act.

Subsection E restricts holding company operations to a single integrated system and to other operations which are only in direct alliance with the major business.

Under subsection "E" a holding company, after last January 1, may submit voluntarily to the SEC a compliance program for the revision of its structure.

The committee of five which signed the letter in New York included:

C. E. Groesbeck, chairman, Electric Bond & Share Co.; J. F. Fogarty, president, North American Co.; Wendell L. Willkie, president, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation; P. L. Smith, president, Middle West Corporation, and John E. Zimmerman, president, United Gas Improvement Co.

Besides the five companies named, executives were present from these firms:

To Stress Diversification.

Charles True Adams, executive of the Utilities Light & Power Co., would have been present, it was said, except for a conference here yesterday with SEC officials.

The committee, in its deliberations with the SEC, will present the viewpoint, it was stressed, "that the fundamental principle of diversity of investment, which is represented here by both geographic location of operating properties and character of business served by them, is a very important factor in the raising of additional capital."

The holding company act requires generally that a holding company confine its operations to a single area instead of holding control of ramified operations over great areas of the Nation. Under its discretionary powers, the SEC since, January 1, has held in abeyance its powers to force compliance, as Douglas has announced a policy of allowing the companies affected to "clean house first."

SEC Approves Licensing.

By the Associated Press.

The Securties and Exchange Commission suggested to Congress yesterday that a Federal licensing law for corporations would be one effective way of attacking abuses in voluntary corporate reorganizations and readjustments.

The suggestion was contained in the seventh or eighth report the commission is making on protective and reorganization committees.

As an alternative to licensing, the commission suggested use of the Federal taxing power as a means of ending alleged abuses arising from "the migration of corporations to States whose corporation statutes are noteworthy for their liberality to corporate organizers and their disregard of the interests of security holders."

Commissioner Jerome Frank, at a press conference, said many provisions of the pending Borah-O'Mahoney licensing bill would remedy conditions which the commission criticized. He also spoke well of the Lea bill, another pending measure.

The commission recommended specifically legislation to require "full disclosure in the case of substantially all plans of reorganization, or readjustment, effected without resort to judicial proceedings," and also legislation limiting the right of management to solicit proxies to those cases in which the interests of management "do not conflict with those of the investors.

The report, discussing State control of corporations, said many States engaged in "charter mongering" because of the laxity of their laws. Frank said that he thought Delaware and Maryland could be classed among such States.

Gov. Leche Is Rumored For Federal Judgeship

By the Associated Press.

An informed person said yesterday Louisiana's Senators had recommended appointment of Gov. Richard W. Leche of Louisiana to the newly created Federal judgeship for the Eastern District of Louisiana. Senators Overton and Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, declined comment, however.

If Leche resigned the Governorship to accept the judgeship it would make Lieut. Gov. Earl K. Long, brother of the late Senator Huey P. Long, chief executive of Louisiana.

Allen Is for District Suffrage Even if It Takes Away His Job

GEORGE E. ALLEN.

He Says: 'If Government Voted In Should Fail to Measure Up to Present Standard, I Still Think the Majority Should Have Its Way.'

By Christine Sadler

Even if they turned him out of office the next day—and he laughingly asserts that "they no doubt would"—Commissioner George E. Allen would like Washingtonians to have the right to run their own government.

"Nothing else fits in with my philosophy. I cannot reconcile the disfranchisement of half of 600,000 people—not in a democracy. Even if the government they voted in should fail to measure up to the present standard, I still think the majority of the people of the District of Columbia should have the government they want," he declares.

Allen says that the three Commissioners of the District began their terms with the idea of giving the people what they wanted, and that they have conscientiously endeavored to follow through on that plan.

Minority Yells Loudest.

"But it is a difficult proposition. The minority often yells the loudest. I try to operate by remembering this saying, 'When in doubt, do the right thing.'"

Which gives the impression that Commissioner Allen is something of a philosopher, which he definitely is. He works from broad principles, rather than minute details, and he seeks constantly the complete picture of a situation. During the worst WPA days, when he was relief administrator in the District, he traveled incognito in 24 different States—collecting the truth behind relief administration. Previously, he had visited breadlines in the Northwest, with the same purpose in mind.

His philosophical trait is evident in his declaration that he is today most interested in the health situation in the District, because health is so intimately connected with happiness. "And that is what we're all striving for," he says.

Cites Progress in Health.

Within the past five years, he points out, the District has made some headway toward the solution of its health problems, but not enough.

"The six-year health program we have mapped out is a good one. The question is finding money to complete it practically and sanely."

As for the money problem, Commissioner Allen thinks it is no nearer solution in the District than it ever has been. He said:

"We have been unable to work out any satisfactory fiscal relationship between the District and the Federal Government. It is most important that the fiscal difficulty be strightened out, and I am very much disappointed that we have been unable to make any headway.

"The people have to have the right to demand certain things, or sometimes they do not get them. It's easy to duck responsibility, if no one is going to check back on you. That is another reason why I feel that the local citizens must have some form of representation in Congress."

Democracy His Hobby.

Commissioner Allen's two big hobbies are golfing and being a good Democrat. "I really give serious thought to my golf," he declares. And his love for the Democrats is an open book. He organized the hotel men for Roosevelt while he was managing the properties of the Wardman Park before becoming Commissioner, and he has just returned from a "good will" Southern trip with Postmaster General Farley. "We did right well in Florida," he asserted.

A native of Mississippi, the Commissioner has the Mississippi facility for being a good fellow and spinning a good yarn. He will tell a joke on himself perhaps quicker than on anyone else, and even if he had enemies they would have a hard time trying to dislike him. He'd probably beat them to an acknowledgement of his faults and have them signed up on his side before they realized it.

To his long list of honors on June 1 will be added the honorary degree of LL. D., which will be bestowed on him by Cumberland University, in Tennessee, where he attended law school.

On Friday—Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department of the Department of Education, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Fight on Hague Is Up to Police, Roosevelt Says

Newark Church Gathering Calls All Citizens to Battle 'Arrogance.'

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt adopted a hands-off attitude yesterday in the Jersey City "free speech" controversy.

In response to a question, he told reporters that because it was a local police matter he could do nothing about complaints that the right of free speech and free assembly had been denied by Mayor Frank Hague.

Meanwhile, the convention of the Newark (N. J.) diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church called on all citizens to "stand firm" for the maintenance of freedom after Bishop Benjamin M. Washburn and Suffragan Bishop Theodore Ludlow declared that Hague threatened not only "personal and political freedom" but also "the right of religious liberty."

"Arrogance" Deplored.

Bishop Washburn deplored "the arrogance of a public official . . . who asserts his superiority to courts and Constitution . . . thus endangering the unalienable rights of free men to their freedom."

But Suffragan Bishop Ludlow named the mayor.

"Mr. Hague, by his high-handed methods," he said, "is hastening into power the very movements which he claims he wants to destroy—by giving them a grievance and a cause."

In Jersey City, Director of Public Safety Daniel J. Casey wrote Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, that the application of the Socialist Party for another outdoor meeting in embattled Journal Square had been turned down. Casey said the citizens of Jersey City were opposed to such meetings.

Representative Bernard (Farmer-Labor) of Minnesota, who turned back to Washington from New York Saturday night to avoid bloodshed at Journal Square, announced he would speak in Jersey City May 19 —not on a public street for which a permit is required, but in a hall under auspices of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Removal Up to Farley.

Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, who went from Washington with Bernard to speak in Jersey City and argued for more than three hours against the international labor defense's decision to abondon its plans, to date had not been invited to the May 19 meeting.

He said he would ask Jersey City officials for a permit to speak there May 21.

President Roosevelt referred to Chairman James A. Farley a question whether as head of the Democratic Party, could remove Hague from the vice chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee.

Roosevelt Will Name Successor to Sultan

President Roosevelt said yesterday he intended to name a new Engineer Commissioner, to succeed Col. Dan I. Sultan, within the next two or three days. The Gallup Poll

Public Favors Passage of Wage-Hour Legislation During This Session of Congress.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, May 10.—The wage-hour legislation which New Dealers have succeeded in bringing to the floor of the House for a vote May 23 is one of the most popular measures put forward by the Roosevelt Administration.

George Gallup.

Its principles have received the overwhelming indorsement of voters in eight separate national surveys conducted during the last two years by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The latest test shows that a sizable majority of the electorate—50 per cent—want Congress to pass a wage and hour bill at this session.

Last week President Roosevelt, for the sixth time since coming into office, asked Congress to take action. Agitation for the bill has likewise been stimulated by two recent New Deal victories in the South: the election of Representative Lister Hill in Alabama last January on a program supporting the wage-hour bill, and the victory of Senator Pepper, staunch Administration supporter, in last week's Florida primaries.

It is possible that the New Deal will take advantage of the popularity of wage-hour legislation to make it a war-cry in the coming Congressional campaign if the bill is not passed before then.

Cross-Section Polled.

The Institute survey asked a representative cross-section of voters in all sections and in all walks of life: "Should Congress pass a bill regulating wages and hours before ending this session?"

The vote was:

Yes	59%
No	41

No geographical section was found opposed to this type of legislation. In the South the majority favoring it was 56 per cent, with a higher favorable vote in the industrial States of the northeast and Great Lakes region. Chief sectional opposition comes from the Midwest farm area. The coolness of farmers toward the measure was reflected in a joint letter sent to the House last week by the National Grange and two other farm organizations opposing the bill.

Following is the sectional vote in the Institute survey:

Should Congress Pass Wage-Hour Bill?

	YES	NO
New England	74%	26%
Middle Atlantic	62	38
East Central	58	42
West Central	50	50
South	56	44
Rocky Mountain	61	39
Pacific Coast	59	41

Sentiment for the bill clearly splits along party lines. The measure is favored by 71 per cent of Democrats, and opposed by 66 per cent of Republicans. Opinion also divides sharply along economic lines, with the upper income group strongly opposed to the legislation, the middle group slightly in favor of it, and the lower group overwhemingly for it.

Why Bill Is Popular.

The Institute's studies have uncovered a wealth of information showing why the wage-hour measure is popular. From thousands of voters in recent months it has collected comments and remarks which indicate widespread public belief that wage-hour legislation will (1) raise the living standard of the "submerged one-third" of the population, and (2) help cure unemployment by spreading work.

But the Institute has also found a more basic reason for the popularity of the proposed legislation.

Special studies made last summer show that about one-half of American families are living on incomes below what they themselves consider necessary for minimum decency standards. The public believes $1,560 a year is necessary for decent support of a family of four, according to the Institute's surveys. Yet Government figures indicate that the typical family lives on $1,300 a year, and that millions of families must get along on less than $1,000.

In view of the discrepancy between what voters consider a necessary minimum income and what they actually earn, the popularity of wage legislation is scarcely surprising. If public opinion continues in its present mood, the drive for such legislation may be merely the first step in a long struggle for wider distribution of income.

Vote on Principle Only.

It should be noted, however, that public approval of the objectives or goals of wage-hour legislation does not imply approval of any specific measure. The NRA sought to regulate minimum wages; yet Institute surveys in 1935 found that NRA had grown unpopular even before the Supreme Court killed it. While the public favored the aims of the NRA, it objected to the methods by which the act was administred.

By the same token, it is possible that the administrative difficulties of a Federal wage-hour act—difficulties which even its staunchest supporters see—may cause a change in public attitude toward this type of legislation.

Davis to Lay Fight For His Job Before Senate Funds Unit

By the Associated Press.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, majority leader, said yesterday he would introduce shortly a resolution to set up a special Senate committee to investigate campaign expenditures.

Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, said he would invite attention of the committee to the Pennsylvania Republican primary and direct its investigators to possible sources of evidence.

Court Blocks Pa. Inquiry Till After Primary

Grand Jury Action Stayed to May 18, Next Day After Voting.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—A grand jury investigation of bribery and coercion charges in Pennsylvania's Democratic primary campaign was called off tonight until after the primary.

The State Supreme Court, with the inquiry set to begin tomorrow morning at Harrisburg, ordered it stayed at least until May 18—the day following the election. The court directed Dauphin County Court and the district attorney there to show cause then why the investigation should not be prohibited.

Two of the seven justices, James B. Drew and George W. Maxey, dissented from the order granting the stay.

The grand jury had been summoned to investigate charges by former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, an independent candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, that "brewing interests" paid $20,000 to two officers in the Earle administration and a Democratic leader for favorable administration in 1935.

When Margiotti refused to give Gov. Earle the evidence on which he had based the charges, he was dismissed and Guy K. Bard named to succeed him.

Senate to Start Inquiry at Once On Civil Service

The Senate investigation of administration of the civil service laws by Federal bureau chiefs will be started this week, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, said yesterday, but actual hearings will be delayed until the beginning of the next Congress.

Senator Ellender said that his special committee of five Senators will meet today or tomorrow to outline a procedure, but he pointed out that it is too late in the session to expect enactment of any remedial legislation before adjournment.

"And if we hold the hearings now, it will all have been forgotten by the time the next Congress meets," he said.

Road Builders Ready To Install President

The American Road Builders Association will install Murray D. Van Wagoner, Michigan State highway commissioner, as president at its annual meeting at the Willard Hotel today, tomorrow and Friday.

A preconvention dinner was held last night by members of the District of Columbia section in the Willard. Officers of the Washington group include H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways for the District, president; W. A. Green, first vice president; William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, second vice president, and Francis J. Kelly, secretary.

Dixon to Govern Alabama; Run-off Rival Withdraws

By the Associated Press.

Selma, Ala., May 10.—Chauncey Sparks, runner-up in last week's Democratic contest for Governor, announced his withdrawal today, assuring Frank M. Dixon of the governorship.

Dixon, 46-year-old Birmingham attorney and World War hero, becomes the Democratic nominee and will take office in January. Democratic nomination being tantamount to election in Alabama.

Complete unofficial totals gave Dixon 152,612 votes of the 314,000 cast for five candidates. Sparks received slightly under 75,000.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, sour or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or upset—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Senators Grill Morgenthau on Fiscal Policies

Treasury Head Wins on Plan to Extend Power to Issue Bonds.

Seeking a liberalization in Treasury borrowing powers, Secretary Morgenthau yesterday was subjected to rigid cross-examination by Senate Finance Committee conservatives on Federal fiscal policies, it was learned last night.

The Finance Committee in executive session approved Morgenthau's recommendation for more latitude in Government financing through long-term bonds instead of Treasury bills. A bill removing the $25,000,000,000 restriction on the amount of bonds which may be issued under a total debt limitation of $45,000,000,000 was ordered favorably reported.

But before Morgenthau left the committee room he was subjected to a barrage of questioning on the Federal deficit, use made by the Treasury of social security act payroll taxes and the obligations outstanding and authorized to be issued by some 19 Federal agencies.

Byrd Leads Questioning.

At suggestion of Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, the committee asked Morgenthau to report on all Government corporations having authority to issue securities, the total of such obligations outstanding and the amount they are authorized to issue.

Morgenthau agreed to supply the information but did not have the data at hand. It has been reported that some $5,000,000,000 in such obligations now is outstanding and Government corporations have authority to issue nearly $10,000,000,000.

Senator Byrd, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, joined in the questioning, it was said.

Pay Roll Tax Data Is Asked.

Some committeemen said Byrd won from Morgenthau the admission that the estimate of a $3,700,000,000 deficit for the next fiscal year made by Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell before the House Appropriations Committee, was "too low" and was being revised. Byrd was quoted as saying he thought a $5,000,000,000 deficit for the next fiscal year would be "conservative."

Vandenberg and others asked the Treasury secretary what use was being made of taxes collected under the social security act and if these receipts were being used by the Treasury in lieu of issuing bonds that would increase the National debt. Morgenthau agreed to supply the committee with available pay roll tax data.

Morgenthau went before the committee to explain why the Treasury is seeking more leeway in its long-term borrowing power. The bill he recommended previously had been reported by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Total Sufficient.

He explained that under an act of February 4, 1935, the amount of bonds outstanding at any one time is limited to $25,000,000,000, while the amount of Treasury notes, certificates of indebtedness and Treasury bills outstanding at any one time is limited to $20,000,000,000.

"The total combined amounts that may be issued under the two limitations," he said, "are, I believe, sufficient for the present but the division as between bonds and notes, certificates of indebtedness and Treasury bills should be adjusted in order to give the Treasury more latitude as to the kind of securities it can issue."

"In the months of June, September and December, 1938, the Treasury has maturities of Treasury notes aggregating more than $1,600,000,000 face amount and it will probably be necessary during this period to raise additional cash between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000, making total financing during the next eight months' period, exclusive of Treasury bill operations, of more than $2,600,000,000.

No Increase Sought.

"It may be highly desirable, from the standpoint of the public debt program and the Government security market, for the Treasury to meet the maturing notes and to raise whatever additional cash is necessary, or a major portion thereof, through the issuance of additional Treasury bonds, rather than through the issuance of Treasury notes."

Morgenthau said that after reserving $248,000,000 to meet the estimated additional issues of United States savings bonds in this period, only $1,460,000,000 would be available for further bond issues under the present limitation. He said this might not be sufficient to meet Treasury requirements as notes mature aggregating more than $1,600,000,000.

Of the $20,000,000,000 limit on notes, certificates of indebtedness and Treasury bills, the Treasury had outstanding on April 3 only $13,830,009,050, leaving an additional amount that could be issued of $6,169,990,950.

"I should like to emphasize," concluded Morgenthau, "that we are not asking for an increase in the total limitation on the aggregate of the public debt obligations which may be outstanding at any one time under authority of the second Liberty Bond act, as amended, but we are asking only for a consolidation of the present limitations on the two classes of securities mentioned in that act so as to give the Treasury greater flexibility in its financing operations."

$400,000,000 Appropriation for Flood Control Will Be Recommended by House Committee.

A flood control program authorizing appropriations of $400,000,000 will be recommended by the House Flood Control Committee, Representative Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio, a member, said yesterday. He told the Associated Press the sum would be a compromise between $300,000,000 originally favored by the President, and $460,000,000 proposed in Congress.

Rep. Secrest.

The committee was said to have agreed that the Federal Government should pay for the actual construction of flood control reservoirs, and should stand 70 per cent of the cost of acquiring land and relocating highways, railroads and utilities.

The latter provision would be a marked change from existing law, which requires local contributions amounting to 100 per cent of the cost of land purchases and relocations.

Pierce, (Democrat), of Oregon, Martin F. Smith, (Democrat), of Washington and Warren G. Magnuson (Democrat), of Washington, conferred for two hours yesterday, discussing administration of the project.

"We want to develop a yardstick for the sale of power generated on the Columbia River, in order that the ultimate consumers in that area may be able to secure electricity at reasonable prices," Rankin said.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, asserted yesterday that continued expansion of national chain store systems would lead to Government ownership.

"If a few retail distributors obtain a monopoly," he said, "the people will demand Government ownership."

Patman spoke on a National Broadcasting Company program, addressing particularly the United States Wholesale Grocers Association, meeting at Dallas.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill appropriating $50,000 to pay expenses of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission. It also would permit the commission to use $150,000 from sale of publications to meet its obligations and salaries of its employes.

Woman Goes to Jail Rather Than Pay $5 After 3-Year Fight

Miss Lillian Clawans, of Newark, N. J., appeared before Police Court Judge McMahon yesterday and announced her intention of serving a five-day jail term rather than pay a $5 fine imposed three years ago when she was arrested here on a disorderly conduct charge.

Miss Clawans was arrested June 7, 1935, at Police Headquarters, where she was protesting the arrest of her sister, Ethel Clawans, on charges of reselling portions of railway excursion tickets without a license. She was found guilty of disorderly conduct by Judge McMahon and appealed. When the Court of Appeals denied her writ of error in 1936, she went to the Supreme Court, which refused to review the case.

Conferees Seek To Save Taxicab Insurance Bill

Compromise Proposed to Enact Measure Before Adjournment.

In an effort to save the District taxicab insurance bill from death upon adjournment, Senate and House conferees today will try to work out a compromise of the bond deposit controversy.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, said he would call the conference after the Senate had reversed its approval and agreed to another meeting with the House, which on Monday rejected the Senate bill.

The only issue is whether cab associations will be permitted to deposit a cash bond of $75,000 with the Public Utilities Commission in lieu of insurance policies for each cab.

Opponents of the provisions contend that it would foster a monopoly by giving the organized taxi men an advantage over the independents. Sponsors insist that the independents could organize and obtain the same advantage.

The Senate approved without discusion the Juvenile Court reform bill and sent it to the White House for the President's signature.

Culminating years of study and campaigning, the legislation will change completely the character of the Children's Court by converting it into a chancery tribunal.

The bill passed the House in March, 1937, and the Senate in August, the same year, but has been tied up in conference until last week.

Senate Accepts Marine Labor Board Proposal

Three Members to Draw $10,000 Yearly Each; Clark Opposes It.

By Edward T. Folliard

The Senate yesterday tentatively approved the creation of a Maritime Labor Board of three members, each to receive $10,000 a year.

The board, provided for in the Copeland bill making numerous amendments in the merchant marine act of 1936, was proposed by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, after Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Maritime Commission, now Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, and Secretary Perkins had quarreled over what Kennedy called a "disgraceful" labor situation in the American merchant marine.

In the debate yesterday, Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said that the labor provisions in the Copeland bill were "worse than no provisions at all." Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, agreed with Clark. He said the proposed board would have no authority and the Senate, therefore, was simply creating $10,000-a-year jobs for three men who would have nothing to do.

Thomas Defends It.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, defended the proposed board, saying that the lack of compulsion was "the essence of decent labor relations." To compel a settlement of disputes, he said, would "violate a fundamental right of the American working man."

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Commerce Committee, which reported the bill, described the labor provisions as "sane and sensible."

The bill specifically states that none of its provisions shall interfere with the right of maritime employes to strike. The board would attempt to bring about a settlement of disputes through mediation or arbitration only when both parties gave their consent.

No penalties are imposed, the aim of the board being merely "to provide and encourage orderly procedure."

Miss Perkins Held Winner.

Kennedy proposed to Congress last November that the provisions of the Railway Labor act be applied to the maritime industry, thereby insuring a "cooling off" period when strikes were threatened.

Secretary Perkins, along with the C. I. O., fought Kennedy's proposal, insisting that the maritime industry was not "ripe" for such mediation machinery. Kennedy retorted that it was "rotten ripe" for it, but the view on Capitol Hill is that Miss Perkins has got the better of the argument.

The Senate yesterday also approved an amendment to the 1936 act which authorizes the Maritime Commission to provide a system for training officers and men for the merchant marine service. Kennedy had suggested that merchant marine sailors be trained by the Coast Guard, and the suggestion was vehemently opposed by the C. I. O. maritime unions. The amendment approved yesterday leaves it to the Maritime Commission to work out the plan of training.

The Senate is expected to pass the Copeland bill today. The House has passed a bill which, in committee, was stripped of labor and training provisions.

Martin Is Given Power to Crush Wildcat Strikes

Board Can Now Suspend Members in 'Quickies' or Have Them Fired.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 10.—Homer Martin, confronted with factional disputes in the United Automobile Workers Union which he heads, succeeded today in centralizing in the executive board power to punish instigators of "wildcat" strikes.

The Martin-controlled board took over the power by resolution.

Martin said the board would investigate three recent strikes and that suspension or expulsion of U. A. W. leaders might result. The three involved the Chevrolet small parts plant at Bay City, Mich.; the assembly line of the Packard Motor Car Co. in Detroit, and eight Detroit plants of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corporation.

An "authorized" strike requires a two-thirds vote of local union members involved, and approval of the international U. A. W. officers. Sudden work stoppages have drawn complaint from employers that the union is unable to control its members.

Firings May Result.

The board's resolution condemned unauthorized strikes as having "penalized, without voice or vote, thousands of workers directly and indirectly affected by them." Martin said members convicted of violating union procedure may be suspended or expelled, or the board may ask their employers to discharge them.

Martin said he had discussed today's resolution, before submitting it to the executive board, with John O'Leary, a representative of John L. Lewis.

The executive board accompanied its denunciation of "wildcat" strikes and threat of severe penalties today with this pledge to its local unions:

"Should the management attempt wage cuts, the impairing of working conditions or the refusal to settle legitimate grievances in keeping with the contract, the international union will not hesitate to authorize and fully support strike action in keeping with the international constitution to meet the offenses of the employer."

Action Unanimous.

Even before the resolution was adopted today, Martin disclosed, the board had approved the suspension from employment for 30 days of a local union committeeman involved in a strike at the plant of the Detroit Moulding Corporation here.

Martin said the board's action today was unanimous.

Policeman Slays Man Who Held Up Ice Cream Store

A colored man fatally shot yesterday by a policeman, in the 600 block of C street southwest, was identified last night as the gunman who held up an ice cream store a few hours earlier and escaped with $30.

The shooting occurred when Patrolman James C. Duffy, 26, of the Fourth Precinct, discovered the man lurking behind a warehouse. According to Duffy, the man attempted to shoot at him but his gun misfired. Duffy then pumped three shots at his assailant.

Tech Girl Student Hit; Driver Jailed

Norma Rasmussen, 16, McKinley Technical High School student, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night after she was struck by a car at Hyattsville, Md., near the B. & O. Railroad overpass.

The girl, who lives in Cottage City, Md., was given little chance to recover. Physicians said she suffered severe head injuries and a compound fracture of the leg. According to Prince Georges police, she was hit while walking along the road.

Thomas Carter, colored, 59, of 1330 R street northwest, driver of the car, was charged with reckless driving and freed under bond of $300.

Selassie Is Off To State Case Before League

Council Awaits His Arrival Before Recognizing Italy's Conquest.

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 10.—Emperor Selassie tonight blocked Great Britain's plan to obtain League of Nations approval for recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

The League council, after listening to Britain's defense of her "realistic" dealings with Premier Mussolini, postponed a showdown on the question of Ethiopia's sovereign existence until Selassie can reach Geneva. He left London by train tonight.

The British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, and French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet were said to be "impatient" at the delay which will give Soviet Russia more time to organize another attack on the western powers in Ethiopia's defense.

The Ethiopian question was put over until Thursday. Britain and France obtained a statement from the Council members that, if Selassie fails to appear, the matter will be disposed of Thursday without further ado.

If he fails to appear his delegates will be allowed to sit in the Council meeting—not as "representatives of Ethiopia" but as "representatives of Haile Selassie."

Some quarters believed that extreme pressure was exerted on the Negus in London to dissuade him from coming to Geneva.

The Ethiopians said Selassie would not be content with a mere explanation of his case—he claims that Italy is in control of only about one-fourth of Ethiopia after two years—but will reply in full to Halifax's statements.

Soviets Overridden.

Aside from its moral effect, Selassie's personal plea and defense can have no material affect on the determination of Britain and France to go ahead with their plans to accord recognition to the new Italian empire in Africa, League statesmen said.

Ethiopia's sovereign existence was doomed today when the Council overrode bitter Soviet resistance and rallied to support of the Anglo-French policy of "realistic" bartering with Italy.

Chinese Arrive.

The League Council threw its majority support to a British statement, backed up by France, that the Italo-British pact of friendship probably has preserved peace throughout the world.

China came before the Council with an announcement that China's armies have turned the tide of the war in the Orient and "shattered the myth that Japan's army is invincible."

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador to France, announced that the time has come after six years for the League to take "concrete measures" and permit China to obtain war materials and supplies.

Only Russia, he said, has recognized and aided China.

Loyalists Block Franco's Effort To Widen Wedge

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), May 10.— Spanish insurgeent and government armies battled to a deadlock today on the vital central fronts.

Along the coast road to Alcala de Chivert, where insurgents have been attempting to widen their wedge toward Valencia and Castellon de la Plana, government troops blocked their advance from hilltop entrenchments.

Inland, around Cuevas de Vinroma, 30 miles north of Castellon, government counterattacks were stalled against strong insurgent positions after government forces had captured heights just north of Cuevas.

The fighting centered on the approach to the sea where insurgents attempted to widen their seaboard strip by folding the government right flank back to the west.

The campaigns were confined to local actions. Although the insurgents made effective use of superior artillery, their command apparently was waiting for sodden ground to dry before launching a new general offensive.

Court Chaperones Child Bride

August Scola, 19, of Media, Pa., and his 17-year-old bride who, he charged, was taken from him by her parents and locked up for 37 days, began their married life anew yesterday—with a court-appointed chaperone making a daily checkup. The husband's brother and mother were required to furnish a ten-year bond for the couple's support. Scola and bride are shown preparing a meal.

great Central China Railway cross—the center of which is in Suchow.

The vertical sector of the cross is a section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway about 100 miles long still held by the Chinese. Its arms are those sections of the Lung-Hai Railway west of Suchow to Kweiteh and east of Suchow to Haichow, on the Yellow Sea.

The first Japanese army, advancing northward from the Nanking-Pukow area, had advanced about 25 miles in 24 hours and was split into a dozen columns, some of which were within long range artillery fire of the vital fortified Lung-Hai line defending the provisional capital in Hankow.

Two Cities Captured.

The second army advancing southward from bases in south Shantung Province, north of the eastern section of the Lung-Hai line, had captured two more cities.

The third army was spread over a wide front along the Yellow River north of Kaifeng to cut off Chinese lines of retreat west of Suchow.

Foreign military attaches described the Suchow campaign as "a crushing drive" and the greatest operation to date in the war.

Berliners Turn Out at Goering's Order to Show Gratitude.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 10.—Adolf Hitler came home in triumph tonight acclaimed for "concluding a steel axis from the Baltic to Sicily" on his six-day visit with Benito Mussolini in Italy.

Berliners turned out in throngs to welcome their Fuehrer in response to Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's manifesto calling for an unprecedented display of gratitude to Hitler for welding 120,000,000 Germans and Italians together in conferences with his Italian fellow-dictator.

Goering declared that "steel axis" thrust across western Europe "defies all disruptive forces and is a sure guarantor of peace."

Three hundred and sixty thousand men of the army and Nazi formations lined the 2½-mile route from the station to the chancellery and guns boomed a salute.

Flames spouted from 70-foot pylons, erected over night and thousands cheered Hitler's limousine as it passed through the floodlighted streets, bearing him home from the exhaustive splendor of Italy's entertainment and long talks with Il Duce.

French War Chief Says His Country Can't Aid Czechs

Paris, May 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Albert Niessel, former member of France's supreme war council and one-time inspector general of the air force, said tonight that France was powerless to give any military aid to Czechoslovakia in event of a German invasion.

He asserted that Czechoslovakia—notwithstanding her military alliance with France—must depend upon her immediate neighbors, who are capable of instantly mobilizing 2,000 airplanes and 84 divisions of infantry and artillery.

Germany's new Rhineland fortifications are sufficient, he said, to hold back the French army with a small defense force while the bulk of the Reichswehr war machine could invade the Bohemian districts of Czechoslovakia.

Navy Promotes 66; Ingersoll A Rear Admiral

President Approves Action of Navy in Advancing 3 Corps' Officers.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the promotion of 66 naval officers of the Medical Construction and Chaplain corps to the ranks of commander, lieutenant commander and lieutenant and nominated another officer to be rear admiral.

Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll, chief of the War Plans Division of the Office of Naval Operations, was recommended by Mr. Roosevelt for advancement to flag rank.

During a trip to London last winter, Ingersoll conferred with British officials on the British rearmament program and American battleship-building plans, then in an early stage of development. He was still abroad when the Congressional hearings on the naval expansion bill opened and various members of Congress charged his conversations had resulted in "understandings" between the United States Navy and the British admiralty.

These charges were vigorously denied by Admiral William D. Leahy in his appearances before the House Naval Affairs Committee. He declared the conversations had been merely of an explanatory nature and had not resulted in any agreements or approval of joint action.

As director of the War Plans Division, it has been Capt. Ingersoll's job to draw up plans of battle for any prospective war, however remote.

A native of Washington, he is the son of the late Rear Admiral Royal R. Ingersoll. His son, Royal R. Ingersoll 2d, is a lieutenant in the Navy.

Officers approved for promotion to lieutenant commander in the Medical Corps, their present stations and home address, included:

Virginia Connoisseurs and Cavalry Officers Are Expected to Bid.

It will be the "beginning of the end" for Col. Tim McCoy's Wild West Show today in spite of an intervening petition filed in District Court yesterday accusing the show's stockholders with plotting its downfall.

At 11 a. m., the first of 204 trained and "educated" show horses will go on public auction in the Union Stock Yards on Benning road northeast.

Horse fanciers from Virginia, representatives of the Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey Circus and Army Cavalry officers are expected to bid.

The intervening petition was filed by D. T. Bartlett, former legal adjustor of the show. He charged financial backers of the company planned the recent receivership in an effort to defeat wage claims of employes.

Bartlett said he is holding $5,142.56 in wage claims, assigned to him by 54 show people. The creditor in Providence, R. I., who obtained the receivership is not a common creditor, but a stockholder, Bartlett said.

Cherokees Claim U. S. Took Lands, Owes $14,000,000

The Cherokee Indians, through their attorneys, yesterday told the United States Court of Claims that Uncle Sam owed them approximately $14,000,000—$1 an acre—for a vast area in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

The Indians said the land had been expropriated by the Government, but they had never been paid for it.

Former United States Senator Robert L. Owen, himself part Cherokee, heads the list of attorneys that filed the suit. In his brief, he says that President Andrew Johnson in 1868 negotiated a treaty with the Cherokees, agreeing to compensate them for their lands. President Grant, Owen added, approved the settlement. However, he said, the treaty failed when Congress passed a law forbidding treaties with Indian tribes.

He passed the permit examination with flying colors.

Seaman Confesses Firing Champlain

La Havre, France, May 10 (AP).—Police tonight held a seaman who, they said, confessed setting fire to the French liner Champlain.

The sailor, Joseph Salou, was said to have admitted accidentally causing one blaze when he fell asleep with a cigarette in his mouth and then setting a second so he could give the alarm and divert suspicion.

Ihlder Backed By Roosevelt in Housing Fight

Housing

the ADA $16,000,000 for low-rent homes. Yesterday Ihlder guessed that to carry on his program which includes slum clearance an additional $2,000,000 would be necessary in allocations.

Last January the ADA was allocated $1,000,000 by the USHA at the President's suggestion. This money is not yet available, but is contained in the third USHA deficiency bill now pending in Congress. The President's approval of Ihlder's plan indicates that another $1,000,000 may be forthcoming later. Ihlder estimated this much at least would be necessary for slum clearance work.

After Ihlder confers with Bell on amendments to the alley dwelling act he is expected later in the week to confer with Straus on terms of the loan and grant of money on which the District can undertake the program.

Argue Over Details.

Since last fall Ihlder and Straus have argued over details of how a housing program here should be conducted. Straus in his national housing program has been eager for local authorities to build houses as rapidly as possible on cheap land in outlying sections of cities.

Ihlder waited for Presidential approval of his program which would reclaim slums while building new houses. Although Straus offered to lend money for new houses, Ihlder believed that acceptance of the money for that one purpose would throw his balanced program out of line by forcing neglect of slum clearance.

Ihlder outlined his plan in an interview yesterday. According to latest surveys there are 176 squares in the city containing inhabited alleys which the ADA was set up to clear. Limited funds have held the authority to cleaning up 12 in the past three years. Squares containing these alleys contain the worst slum conditions in the city.

Redevelopment Planned.

Essentially, he said, plan of the authority is to redevelop each slum area it demolished into the best possible use for that area. Some of the sites have been, and will be, adaptable to new homes. Others will not, but will be suitable for garages, parking lots, or some other commercial use.

A fundamental part of the program, he said, is that upon demolition of alley and slum homes new homes must be provided for an equal number of ousted residents at rents in the same level.

One essential on which Ihlder and Straus have disagreed in the housing program has been method of keeping rents low. Straus has favored building houses as cheaply as possible and keeping rents low by annual subsidies to be appropriated by Congress.

Opposes Subsidies.

Ihlder, analyzing figures on projects under loan contract in other cities, has found that in some cases subsidies will be larger than the rents. "You cannot rehouse a third of the Nation when the taxpayer pays more in subsidy than the rent," he says.

He favors cutting construction costs to the irreducible minimum and renting the houses at a price which will pay carrying charges and repay the capital invested at the end of the useful life of the homes.

He hopes to secure money from the USHA on a capital grant plan. Then cost of clearing the slum area will be a donation charged against taxpayers. Construction and maintenance costs and repayment of the capital invested will be paid out of rents from the new houses.

ion in a Douglas Aircraft Co. case 11 days before it was made public. The decision, Hoffman said, ordered the company to reinstate a group of sit-down strikers.

Hoffman attributed the story to some C. I. O. undercover representative in the Board's offices.

The Labor Board announced, that it had notified the Douglas company that the board's decision would be withdrawn in May. The board is endeavoring to recall a number of court cases to alter its procedure to comply with the Supreme Court's Kansas City stockyards commission case. In that ruling the high court held the Secretary of Agriculture had not given commission agents an opportunity to contest findings of other officials, on which the Secretary based his rulings upon limiting fees that could be charged by the agents. The Ford company, however, so far has successfully resisted withdrawal of the order against itself.

Emery attacked as an "unprecedented proposal" the effort to compel holders of Government contracts to observe the labor relations act.

"This means," he said, "that the Federal Government, through its Labor Board, will undertake to compel the acceptance of policies by public agencies which it will not apply to itself.

"The President of the United States, in September of last year, said:

"'All Government employes would realize that the process of collective bargaining, as usually understood, cannot be transplanted into the public service.'"

House Battles Over 4,100,000 More Jobs; Republicans Call Spending 'Profligate'

Spend

WPA; 275,000 under the National Youth Administration; 60,000 under the Federal buildings program, and 1,000,000 "man years" of work under the public works program.

It added that 300,000 jobs will be continued for CCC workers under appropriations already made and that over 500,000 will receive work under regular public roads, reclamation, parks, rivers and harbors and flood control projects. It said the Navy's shipbuilding program and the Maritime Commission's merchant marine program also will "contribute materially" to employment.

To Create Customers.

"This program," said Woodrum, means the starting up again of the wheels of industry. There will be no difficulty if business and industry will co-operate."

By providing jobs, Woodrum said, the program would increase purchasing power, and by increasing purchasing power, he said it would provide "customers" for business.

He said critics of the program cannot "tell you what to do with 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 unemployed who are asking the honest American right to make a living for themselves and their families."

When he compared the program to "a shot in the arm" for business, Minority Leader Snell asked: "You really think this is a shot in the arm, and will have no lasting benefit?"

"Whether it is a shot in the arm, a slap in the back or a kick in the pants, if it starts things going again it is worth the cost," replied Woodrum.

The Virginian predicted some members "are going to stand with bowed heads at the wailing wall, view with alarm, and then vote for the bill."

At one point he said: "I do not know whether it will work or not, but all we can do is try."

Taber Joins Attack.

Representative Taber took up the Republican assault, calling the program "an opiate, designed to keep the people fooled until after the next election. Like Snell, he argued that the bill would bring no lasting benefits and would leave the country generally worse off than it was before.

"I am appealing to the membership of the House," Taber said, "to cast aside fear of political reprisals and do what I know the honest judgment of every member of the House calls for, try to meet this problem, repeal the national labor relations act, repeal the agriculture scarcity act, and give our farmers and our business people a chance to put people to work, have honest relief instead of promoting a tremendous building program as a racket."

Taber said Congress should turn relief back to the States, and refuse to sanction a public works program "which cannot be started before January 1, and which will provide very little employment and no relief at all."

Representative Engel (Democrat), of Michigan, in an address later made public by the Republican National Committee, accused the President of abandoning the Democratic platform of economy in the summer of 1933, and substituting since then the 1932 Socialist platform of billions for relief and public works.

Production Doubled.

Following the industrial production chart of the Federal Reserve's board of governors, Engel said industrial production almost doubled during the first four months of the New Deal, while the President was still following "orthodox principles." He said this upward surge stopped when the President substituted a policy of "spending ourselves to prosperity," and the July, 1933, high point was not reached again until January, 1936. Still following the Reserve board chart, Engel said production dropped off again after the November, 1936, elections, and "in March of this year, five years after the New Deal commenced, the industrial production figure was 21 points below the level achieved in July, 1933, as a result of the economy and orthodox policies pursued by the President in the early days of the Administration."

"In other words," said Engel, "despite the expenditure of $40,000,000,000, despite an increase of $17,000,000,000 in our debt, despite the devaluation of the dollar, we were worse off by far in March of this year than we were in July, 1933."

Detailing amounts appropriated by Congress during the last six fiscal years, Engel reached a total of $55,227,587,510 appropriated under the Roosevelt Administration. Authorized, but not appropriated, during that period, was another $3,486,763,615, he said. He declared Congress has appropriated and authorized to be appropriated in the last six years 43.8 per cent of the cost of Government for 144 years and 43.7 per cent of the assessed valuation of the 48 States.

Solution Offered.

"There is only one permanent solution," said Engel, "and that is to abandon the Socialist platform of 1932 and go back to the remedy advocated by both the Republican and the Democratic platforms of that year—drastic economy, pay as you go, doing without many of the things we did without then and can do without again by a little self-sacrifice."

The statement drawn up by the Republican minority at its party conference last night declared the President's program "threatens to plunge the Nation into a cataclysmic inflation, which easily might wipe out the cultural, social and economic progress of an entire generation of people."

Sweeping Shift Of Gallinger's Patients Begun

makeshift pending erection of a new children's ward as recommended by the Public Health Service," Dr. Bocock said.

The second floor of the psychopathic administration building originally was used for pediatrics but for the last few years it has served as a maternity annex, to relieve overcrowding in the obstetrical department of the Gallinger main building.

Although the main medical-surgical building is still overcrowded, the "home delivery" service developed during the past year by the Health Department has relieved congestion in the maternity ward sufficiently to make further use of an annex unessential.

The maternity annex normally housed from 15 to 30 women, spending their last week in the hospital there. Fitted as a children's ward, it will have 50 beds and bassinettes.

With the women patients already moved back into the obstetrical ward, the second floor of the psychopathic administration building was being painted and renovated yesterday by WPA workmen. Dr. Bocock said the shifting of the children, to be followed by transfer of adult convalescents to the former children's ward, should take place in about ten days.

The male medical annex, occupied by patients requiring less care than those acutely ill, will have 53 beds as an eye, ear, nose and throat center. There will be two wards for children and two for adults.

Although the new children's ward will have a top capacity of only 50 beds, compared to 150 in the old building, Dr. Bocock said he believed its size would be adequate, at least for the present.

The administration wing's basement will be equipped as a dietetics department in which food formulas for baby patients will be prepared. At the same time, the basement of the old children's ward will be used jointly as a dispensary for treatment of boys and girls requiring post-hospital attention and as a diagnostic center for crippled children under the Social Security public health program.

The Gallinger superintendent is hopeful that the means somehow will be found to equip properly the new children's, convalescent and eye-ear-nose-throat wards. WPA labor for painting and remodeling is assured for the next six weeks but no extra funds are available for instruments, accessories and supplies.

Despite the fact that internes, nurses and orderlies are working extra long hours, and every possible economy is being effected, the hospital's budget will barely provide sufficient funds for food to last out the fiscal year, it was learned.

That the children's ward would be moved to another building had been held inevitable ever since late last fall, when disclosures in The Post of its run-down condition and fire hazards was followed a few weeks later by the fatal burning of a child patient as she lay in her crib.

Congressional Inquiry Looms On FCC, Radio

Jews, Catholic Clergymen Demand Curb on Some Broadcast Programs.

By the United Press.

Congressional investigation of the embattled Federal Communications Commission and allegedly monopolistic tendencies of the billion-dollar radio broadcasting industry appeared imminent last night, coincident with demands of prominent Jewish and Catholic clergymen that a curb be placed on certain types of radio programs.

Prospects of the twin-edged investigation were heightened in the Senate when the Audit and Control Committee favorably reported a resolution authorizing $25,000 for such an inquiry. Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee agreed to open hearings tomorrow on a similar resolution.

Wise, Sheehy Protest.

The actions coincided with disclosure by FCC Commissioner George Henry Payne that he had received letters from Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, and the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of Catholic University, criticising the social and economic aspects of broadcasting.

The Senate resolution, introduced last year by Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (Republican), Maine, had lain dormant. Its emergence followed Payne's proposal, defeated by the commission, that Congress be invited to investigate the FCC and the possibility that a "leak" on its American Telephone & Telegraph Co. report may have precipitated the sharp stock market decline this spring.

Similarly, the House resolution, introduced early last year by the late Representative William Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, has remained locked in committee.

Blood Is 'Pooled' For Transfusions In Loyalist Spain

Dr. Irving Busch, chief of the international hospitals in loyalist Spain, yesterday described the international "blood pool" as one of the principal transfusion methods in the war-torn nation today in an address before a luncheon sponsored by the Women's Committee to Aid Children of Spanish Democracy.

"There is never enough blood to take care of the number of blood transfusions given, and we have had to utilize the personnel and the lighter wounded soldiers who willingly give some of their blood," said Dr. Busch. "The blood is pooled."

He added that international hospitals are manned in Spain by more than 120 American doctors and technicians, with 27 ambulances and many tons of medical supplies and materials.

Writer Claims Black a Burden To Colleagues

Black

by "the new justices' opinions or convictions," but that "it has grown out of a lack of legal knowledge and experience, deficiencies in background and training that have led him into blunders which have shocked his colleagues on the highest court."

He wrote further:

"It comes back to the matter of craftsmanship. A man with only a limited experience with the law, such as Justice Black, finds it extremely difficult to maintain the pace of the Court. So far the cases that have been assigned to him have been relatively simple. Nevertheless several opinions he has written have been rephrased by other members of the Court, and they have been subsequently released with something less than satisfaction."

It was alleged that such an analysis could have been obtained only by someone with intimate access to the Court.

Further, Childs reported another "and more optimistic view within the Court. It is too early, in this view, to judge the new justice. He is intelligent and he is working harder than perhaps any man to come on the bench in recent times. Sooner or later—and this view assumes that Justice Black's service will be in decades rather than in years—he will abandon his anti-court attitude. The sheer weight of the institution, its tradition, its procedure, its observances will have an inevitable effect."

Fear Roosevelt Wrecking.

Childs then reported that the real anxiety of the other Justices is that the President will wreck the Court through the four appointments he probably will make in the remainder of his term, supposing that Justice Cardozo retires.

After citing the alleged incompetencies of Justice Black, Childs wrote:

"Those Justices who are now most gravely concerned for the future of the institution of which they are a part regard themselves in a large measure as craftsmen, craftsmen of the law. Of the hundreds of cases coming before them in a single term only a few involve large constitutional issues.

"Most of them—the run of the mine cases—are concerned with intricate points of law . . . It is here that craftsmanship is of first importance; and it is precisely here that Justice Black, in the opinion of his colleagues, has failed.

"He has been unable to carry his share of the heavy burden of work that falls on the court nor do his fellow-justices, or most of them, foresee that he will be able to carry it within any measurable time.

Social Views Secondary.

"It must be understood that no fair-minded person questions the sincerity of Justice Black's social views . . . The questiotn is whether he can implement his views with the technic and the language of the Court in such a way that he will serve his cause as well as he served it in the Senate."

Childs gave examples of Black's so-called "offenses."

"Justice Black wrote a long dissent in the Indianapolis utility case in which he argued, cogently and brilliantly, the prudent investment theory of utility valuation. But his dissent had little to do with the case under consideration and even less with the law."

Childs did not note that Black's prudent investment opinion was written at about the same time the President, in press conferences, stressed the importance of this theory as against the utility viewpoint, which seeks "reproduction new" as the proper basis of utility valuation.

Black Not to Comment.

He cited as Justice Black's "most conspicuous dissent thus far in his lonely career" his declaration in a life insurance company case that the word "person" in the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution did not include corporations, which would upset the 50-year-old much criticised traditional opinion of the Supreme Court, which has many times held that corporations are entitled to the same rights as persons under the due process clause, which was originally written in the Constitution to protect the civil liberties of persons.

Childs admitted that these examples might make it difficult for the layman to realize the "nature of Justice Black's offenses."

Justice Black's aides at his Supreme Cout office said he would not comment.

'Cotton Ed' Smith Seeks Re-election

By the Associated Press.

South Carolina's veteran Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith, Democratic dean of the upper house and not always in agreement with New Deal policies, formally announced yesterday he would be candidate for renomination in the State's Democratic primaries in August.

The South Carolinian, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, is serving his fifth term, being outranked in Senate seniority only by Senator Borah.

passing on political features, but said he viewed the agreement between Italy and Britain "with sympathetic interest because it is proof of the value of peaceful negotiations."

Mr. Roosevelt declined to discuss the Nye resolution, but there is little expectation now that the State Department will ask its adoption.

Helium Parley Today.

Senator Borah said in that connection that he thought the American Government should not follow the lead of the British government, but should put itself "in the position of right regardless of whom it hurts."

At the helium conference today the President will talk with Secretary Ickes, Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff; Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson. Mr. Roosevelt discussed the matter with Jackson yesterday also.

The main question, said Mr. Roosevelt, involved two words in the helium law, military importance. The act provides that export regulations to permit sale of the gas for use in foreign-owned commercial airships shall not allow "accumulations of helium in quantities of military importance in any foreign country."

Not Matter of "Word."

Thus the question today will be, according to the President, whether the shipment desired by Germany could serve a military purpose. Asked if it was also a question of whether a foreign government's word could be believed, Germany has promised the gas is for commercial use only, Mr. Roosevelt said it was not a matter of word but of purpose.

Mr. Ickes publicly doubted Germany's word and has insisted the helium is of military importance. Indications at the War Department have been that sentiment there held dirigibles to be of negligible military importance. The utility of military balloons filled with helium was also doubted in view of the greater lifting capacity of hydrogen.

Power Links Stressed.

The President conferred yesterday with Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, and Basil Manly, acting chairman of the Power Commission, as to the adequacy of power in war time, and on the question of connecting power lines not now hooked up.

He cited two examples, saying that if the power system in the District of Columbia were wrecked the District could not get power from Baltimore because there is no connecting link, and adding that there is no physical power connection between one side of the Hudson River and the other at New York City.

Officials of the Potomac Electric Power Co. said last night, however, that already the problem as to the District has been met. There are two power hook-ups between Washington and Baltimore, it was explained.

One is by the wires of the company which run out to Laurel and there connect with the Baltimore company's line. A second circuit is by way of the hydroelectric line from Washington to Ellicott City and from there to Baltimore. Ellicott City is the "splitting point" from which power generated at Safe Harbor, 6 miles south of Columbia, Pa., on the Susquehanna River, is brought to Washington and Baltimore.

Tin Bill Rejected.

The interchange system is in use nearly every day between Washington and Baltimore, company officials said.

The United Press, in a copyrighted article, said last night that the President has rejected the McReynolds bill intended to assure the United States an adequate supply of tin. Formal reports from the State, War, Navy and Interior departments were sent to the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the legislation which was held not to fit into the President's present program.

Minister Luis Guachalla of Bolivia, one of the principal sources of tin, is now engaged in negotiations with the State Department on supplying this country's needs.

In the national defense picture 170 Army war planes last night were scattered at strategic points in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland and New England ready for a mythical attack by a European enemy. The war games in the air were being conducted to study problems of defending the industrial section of the East in case of war.

How does it feel to be born rich?

YOU'RE looking at a dimpled little lady who, without knowing it, was born rich.

Yet her father would smile if you called him a rich man—for he isn't at all. Like most of us, he has a pretty hard time making ends meet.

But, being a thoughtful father, he wanted to make certain that his daughter would have some measure of security. He wanted to make sure that, even if he were not here, things would work out for her pretty much as he had planned them—even to a college education.

And he has made sure of these things—through life insurance!

Now he knows that his little girl—and her mother, too—will never be in need, if anything happens to him.

And having done that, he has gone one step further. He is building up a life insurance plan that is making his own future secure—a plan that will pay him some sort of monthly income in later years.

It's a pretty grand thing, he will tell you—the way life insurance can help a man of moderate means to achieve security—for himself and those he loves.

And that is just what life insurance is doing, today—for more than 64,000,000 thrifty, foresighted Americans!

An Advisory Council For D. C.

As a first step toward improvement of Washington's haphazard governmental system, the plan of electing a citizens' advisory committee is excellent. In sponsoring that idea the Citizens Conference on District Suffrage has revived in modified form one of the best suggestions made by the Jacobs report. More than 18 months ago The Post also pointed out the probable utility of an advisory council which would be a cross-section of the District's most able and civic-minded citizens.

In view of the favorable response to its recent poll, the Conference on Suffrage might have gone to Congress with immediate demands for enfranchisement of local residents. It has chosen a wiser and more practical course. The conference asks only that citizens of the voteless Capital City be given the privilege of making their voice officially heard during the next two years, when reorganization of the local government is certain to be to the fore.

Congress can not reasonably ignore such a moderate and persuasive plea. It has just assigned to a Chicago firm the task of recommending changes in the municipal set-up here from the viewpoints of efficiency and economy. Surely it will not simultaneously deny local citizens the right to express their convictions as to the type of government best suited to the community's needs. The proposed citizen group is a necessary supplement to the expert body which should be relied upon chiefly for technical advice.

The proposed "municipal assembly" would be an invaluable experiment. In addition to working on the reorganization problem, it would be authorized to furnish advice to the District Commissioners and to the committees of Congress dealing with local affairs. Advice thus offered would afford a good index to legislation likely to be enacted if the District should be permitted to govern itself.

If the "assembly" should attract citizens of a high caliber and if it should develop a reputation for sound judgment in the community interest, the demand for complete local suffrage would be greatly strengthened. On the other hand, a mediocre advisory body would probably dampen the enthusiasm for an elected District legislature.

Local government in Washington is apparently entering a period of transition. It is no time time to take a dogmatic stand on any assumed panacea. The community is likely to be far better satisfied with eventual results if it carefully feels its way toward more responsible government. By moving a step at a time major mistakes can be more easily avoided and urgent reforms can be more quickly applied. There would be real substance in an initial step which would create a representative committee of citizens to serve in an advisory capacity.

Lump Sum Appropriations.

The work-relief bill just introduced into the House closely follows the recommendations made by the President. But instead of leaving allocation of the lump sums appropriated to his discretion the bill makes direct appropriations to the spending agencies. The significance of this departure from previous practice has, however, disappeared with the insertion of a proviso that outlays on individual WPA projects shall be subject to Presidential approval. That was already the case for PWA projects.

With or without this last-minute change, made at the President's urging, the bill before the House calls for an indefensible surrender of Congressional responsibility in determining how public funds shall be spent. Certain limitations are put upon the maximum amounts to be spent for various classes of public works, as in previous legislation of this type. But the lump sums allocated for each broad classification are so huge and embrace such a heterogeneous assortment of projects that they impose no real check on executive spending discretion.

For instance, $425,000,000 of the $1,250,000,000 appropriated for WPA is allocated to highways, roads and streets, and $575,000,000 to a varied list of undertakings from public buildings and public utilities to sewer systems and flood control. This jumble of projects for which money up to a stated maximum may be spent is a travesty of an itemized appropriation bill.

After reading the bill it seems evident that the insertion of the provision centralizing responsibility for spending in the hands of the President is a change for the better. While executive spending agencies subject to Presidential control would hardly dare to disregard his wishes, it is against all good administrative theory to vest in them an unchecked responsibility.

What should be done is to ear-mark relief funds for specific projects in much greater detail and with more precision. Under the House bill the discretion which Congress should exercise has been conferred upon the Chief Executive and his spending agencies. The Senate should at least consider rewriting the whole measure with a view to reasserting legislative control over the purse strings.

As Others See Us.

Trained foreign observers of the American scene have an outstanding advantage over most of us. They are in a better position to pass an objective judgment upon the policies of our Government, both because of a wider perspective and because of indifference to local partisanship. For that reason it is especially interesting to see that the annual report of the Bank for International Settlements, at Basle, cites this country's unsuccessful experience with economic planning as a warning to other nations.

The report emphasizes that the current depression originated in the United States and has been exceptionally violent. And this it finds to be the case in spite of the fact that: "In no country except those in which the government practically controls the whole of economic life has administrative action been so strong and widely spread."

This is not the first time that the United States has been held up to the world as a runner-up to the dictatorships for planning honors. Last fall the International Institute of Agriculture, in Rome, an independent fact-finding organization, placed this country "under the Roosevelt Administration" second only to "the totalitarian states and Soviet Russia" in its addiction to governmental regimentation of agriculture and trade.

The B. I. S. officials, accepting this rating, conclude that governmental planning is a demonstrated failure from the viewpoint of securing recovery. That opinion is re-enforced not only by the severity of our current business set-back, but by the fact that conditions here are more favorable to the success of planning than elsewhere. In this connection the B. I. S. report cites the advantage of our extensive home market and our comparative economic and political independence of the rest of the world.

Nonetheless the report concludes that there can be no minimization of the interdependence of modern countries. As by far the largest consumer of primary products entering world commerce, the United States exerts a great influence upon economic conditions in other countries. A sharp decline in domestic activity means a lessened demand for foreign raw materials. Depression, like the virus of devaluation, tends to spread from one infected region to another. As an institution interested in the restoration of stable economic and financial conditions throughout the world, the B. I. S. strongly opposes a renewal of currency devaluation as a remedy for the present depression.

Unfortunately its warnings fall on unheeding ears. In this country Congress is preparing to pass another huge pump-priming program, after approving a drastic form of agricultural regimentation. And France has announced a further devaluation of the franc which is likely to result in similar action by Belgium. All these isolated adjustments, of course, create new maladjustments which lead to further international unsettlement.

That is why they arouse grave misgivings among economists and financiers who have learned from experience that "the chief effect of this walking out of step is greater disorder in the general economic development of the world."

Wheat Prospects.

In spite of the enormous wheat crop forecast yesterday, growers will escape this year from the drastic marketing quotas about which cotton and tobacco farmers are complaining. The new Agricultural Adjustment Act provides that no marketing quota shall be in effect for wheat in 1938, unless farmers are granted parity payments. Congress has not made funds available for that purpose.

Substantial changes in the outlook for wheat may occur between now and harvest time, but present indications are that Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" will be filled to overflowing. Farmers planted an unusually large crop last fall, despite the general assumption that a drastic farm bill would be passed. The aim of the AAA is to maintain wheat supplies at about the 900,000,000 bushel level. Indications are, however, that the total crop and carryover in July may exceed that figure by considerably more than 200,000,000 bushels.

Presumably loans will be made to wheat farmers, in spite of the fact that marketing quotas can not be applied. The act calls for Commodity Credit Corporation loans to maintain reserve wheat supplies and support farm prices when the July forecast indicates a crop in excess of normal domestic consumption and exports. If these loans are fixed at a point high enough to discourage exports, the carryover next year is likely to be still greater.

Under normal conditions, therefore, wheat growers will face a really drastic cut in acreage next year. Marketing quotas will be computed for each individual farm, and any grower selling wheat in excess of that arbitrary allotment will be compelled to pay a penalty tax of 15 cents per bushel. Of course, farmers may reject any marketing quota if they are willing also to forego AAA benefits.

Many thousands of farmers are just beginning to realize the implications of the collectivist policy enacted by the present Congress. As the drastic provisions of that act become more familiar to those who have indorsed it, the chorus of protests already heard may be expected to swell. Perhaps it is just as well that nature is providing an early test. At least farmers will soon be able to determine whether they are willing to surrender control of their crops for Federal subsidies.

A Disturbing Prospect.

Testifying before a House appropriations subcommittee, Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, indicated that the deficit for the coming fiscal year might exceed $3,700,000,000. This figure is probably too high, as Mr. Bell thinks it most unlikely that the entire amount appropriated for public works projects will be spent within the year.

Even with generous allowance for a possible overestimate of the prospective deficit, however, it is certain to reach a formidable size if Congress approves the Administration's pump-priming program. How formidable is best realized by reminding ourselves that the deficit incurred in 1936—the largest in peace time—amounted only to $4,800,000,000 net, including outlays of nearly $1,700,000,000 for bonus payments. So much for President Roosevelt's assurances that it is the "deficit of today which is making possible the surplus of tomorrow."

As a matter of fact, five years of New Deal pump priming have raised the public debt from about $22,000,000,000 to over $37,000,000,000 exclusive of contingent obligations. And after all this lavish inflationary spending, we have witnessed the sudden collapse of the stimulated recovery movement and have taken another plunge into depression. We have about as many unemployed today as we did when the "spending-for-recovery" program began. And we are left with a dangerously swollen Federal indebtedness and with heavy additions to it in prospect.

In spite of this discouraging record, WPA Administrator Hopkins offers no new suggestions for coping with the mounting volume of unemployment. He simply asks for more money to create more relief jobs, indicating that the amount needed may reach $3,000,000,000 next year, or three times the original budget estimate.

Mr. Hopkins places slight faith in the stimulative effect of pump priming upon private business. Moreover, he thinks that this country is confronted by an insoluble problem of chronic unemployment calling for a permanent Federal relief organization. If his assumptions are correct, it becomes all the more imperative to reform methods of administering relief. We cannot go on year after year spending lavishly and piling up deficits which impose an increasing strain upon the Federal credit. A so-called permanent relief system financed by heavy borrowing must eventually end in disaster.

The necessity of balancing the budget has actually been emphasized by the depression, which has caused the Administration to reverse its policies. Recurrent deficits impair confidence and thus interfere with the reentry of workers into private employment. The way to meet that situation is to reduce relief expenditures by substantial amounts. It could be done without neglecting the needy by decentralizing the relief system and compelling local governments to defray a certain percentage of relief costs.

A reform of this sort would reduce budgetary deficits and in so doing help to restore confidence and provide more jobs for the unemployed. Federal assumption of responsibility for a system of permanent work relief, on the other hand, would seriously impair the chances of return to a balanced budget, and thus undermine the foundations of the relief system itself.

Call Henry.

Some of these days, when all wages are up and all working hours down, when peace is stabilized and destructive passion soothed, the sporting page, then as now a main attraction of a newspaper, may have a somewhat different complexion.

The populace, inured to leisure, will have ceased to be primarily sightseers, and newspaper followers of athletic events will be participators, regardless of age or condition of economic servitude. The army of golf players, checker players, contract players, pigeon fanciers, bowlers, fishermen and horseshoe throwers will conform with the census returns. And, as a consequence, the sporting editor's technique is likely to know considerable modification. Professional baseball, football and other big "show" games may then receive treatment more on the order of the circus. They will stand out as the stimulating commercial spectacles which they actually are.

But then, as now, one thing of beauty will smile at us from the sporting page, like a buttercup or daisy in a meadow. It will be the unmistakable symbol of youth, cast in youth's own mold, as manifested in this note from a recent issue of The Post:

"The Chevy Chase Scrappers are seeking games with Pee-Wee teams. Call Henry at EMerson 8448."

"Let's not forget to see those historical monuments carved on the face of Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, including Sherman, et. al."—Nina Wilcox Putnam. Southerners have a keen sense of humor, it is true, but not the kind that would lead them to carve comic pictures on the face of a stone mountain.

"The newly organized third party will attract all the fanatics, demagogues, bellyachers, political montebanks, morons, screwballs, malcontents, ne'er-do-wells and crackpots in the country," decares an editor. If so, it will have a sweeping majority.

What Is News?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While so much is being said pro and con concerning "propaganda" in the columns of The Post, may I suggest that usually the most inspiring occurrences never get into print. A preacher goes fishing on Sunday and excuses his act by saying that he gave the fish he caught to needy families. This is published by radio and press. But little or nothing is said concerning an act at Birmingham, Ala., where a great church conference which directly affected a constituency of 35,000,000 of our leading people, solved problems which will mean more to America ultimately than any session of Congress is likely to mean.

Three leaders of their respective church organizations stood before a conference of 500 delegates of Methodism, joined their hands in testimony of organic and spiritual unity, sang with the vast throng, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and pronounced in unison the benediction, in testimony of their oneness in spirit.

This marked the end of friction among the different branches of one of the largest church organizations in America. It marked the solution of the Negro problem in that organization. It gave a deathblow to sectionalism in church circles. It marked a great stride forward and upward, that as Heaven sees things of earth, it is of far more importance than the "keeping up with the Joneses" act which was occurring at the same time in Italy, where two dictators, like two little schoolboys, were trying to show who could spit the farthest! The "unusual" is still known as "news," hence when a preacher fishes on Sunday this takes precedence above an epochal act such as I have given above.

Mothers of Soldiers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That was the strangest Mother's Day message I have ever heard—the one delivered by Brig. Gen. Robert M. Beck, jr., in the Arlington Amphitheater last Sunday.

Standing there in the midst of the dead, he told the bereaved that "we are ready to expand our Army enormously" when war comes again. There will be still more boys to be killed and buried around him who lies there unknown.

Those are such comforting thoughts for the mothers of sons of military age. Reassuring, too, when they can look away from the general's uniform across the hills pocked with graves and see the acres yet to be filled.

Production And Jobs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his largely political talk recently Mr. Hoover glibly used such terms as "economy of scarcity" and "increased production." The former he considered an unmixed evil and he praised the latter as a positive blessing. The former President does not seem to realize that increased production is itself an evil, under the capitalistic system, unless linked with better distribution.

It should be apparent to all that modern machinery has made possible increased production by fewer men. Running these machines at full capacity will not solve the problem, for it will only result in overproduction unless it is connected with increased power to buy. Overproduction with underconsumption is the cause of all our depressions. What is needed to prevent these economic breakdowns is not more production of goods with fewer men, but the employment of more men to share in the increased productivity of the machine, and so increase buying power along with increased production. Without this increase in buying power increased production will only result in glutting markets with unsalable products, and that surely is no cure for a depression.

If Mr. Hoover will show us how the millions of men now unemployed can be employed to increase production he will do us a service that his present imperfect suggestions fail to render.

Sally Rand At Harvard.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is no less than startling to read that Sally Rand, danseuse incomparable, is to lecture to a select group of Harvard freshmen on "How to Be Intelligent Though Educated."

The lecture had better be directed at the shortsighted officials of the university for bringing a woman of Miss Rand's dubious qualifications to lecture before the students. What would our pioneer educators think of this sort of desecration of our college campuses in the name of education?

The Franciscan Monastery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to make a little suggestion through the columns of your paper. The Franciscan Monastery at Brookland is one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most devotional spots in Washington. In the summer time it is visited by thousands of people from all parts of the country.

A very large number of people go either in buses or in their own private conveyances. But, on the other hand, a great number go by the street cars. When they arrive in Brookland, at the bottom of the well-known Quincy street, they find themselves confronted with a long hill, which, at any rate, for older people, is difficult to climb, especially, during the burning heat of the day. I must say that when they reach the top of the hill they are well rewarded by the magnificent view of the monastery and the beautiful gardens in the environment. It is a tiring climb, however, for those who are not so fortunate as to own a car.

I have, therefore, thought that it would be a splendid thing if some enterprising young man could (all due requirements of the law, etc., permissions, licenses from the Department of Traffic being complied with) bring out a conveyance that would take pedestrians from the base of Quincy street to the monastery for the charge of about 3 cents.

This could be managed by converting an automobile truck into a conveyance with seats holding ten or a dozen people. I am sure that such an arrangement would not only be profitable to the one who undertook the same, but it would prove a boon to those lovers of the monastery who find the hill hard to climb.

Based On Assumptions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is generally assumed that increased immigration will increase unemployment in this country.

It seems to me that the contrary is true. Unemployment in this country at present appears to be due to the fact that the country is not expanding at a sufficiently rapid rate to provide work for all who are willing to work. Prosperity is based on expansion, and expansion means providing capital expenditures for increased population. Without immigration our normal increase in population is insufficient to provide the expansion necessary for prosperity.

Assuming, for example, that 100,000 immigrants are allowed to enter this country a year. Assuming further that each immigrant will require immediately $5,000 outlay for housing, educational facilities, hospitalization, etc. Then the total amount of capital expenditures for that year for labor and materials will be $500,000,000, most of which will be supplied from private capital now lying idle. Assuming further that each immigrant will earn $500 for that year, or a total of $50,000,000, then the net surplus of $450,000,000 equivalent of work and materials will aid our own people in providing work and using up surplus material.

Swastika In Rome.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This item from a "News Bulletin," April 28, 1938, is of interest in the light of an editorial and cartoon in a recent issue of The Post.

"According to A. E. du Bois, chief American military expert on such matters as emblems for the U. S. Army, the swastika is one of more than 700 types of the Christian Cross that he has been able to identify. It is now used in the U. S. Army as the emblem of the Forty-fifth Division of the National Guard. They took the idea from the Indians and from the coat-of-arms of Francisco Vasquez Coronado, Spanish explorer . . . The swastika, being a real Christian Cross, served as an emblem of the Russian imperial family."

The recent protest against the appearance of the swastika in Rome was something in the nature of a "tempest in a teapot."

Comment On The Pepper Victory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal may get some comfort out of the results of the Florida primary, in that Senator Pepper was nominated over all his opponents, but if they are willing to look a little closer, I am sure that they will not find much to brag about.

It is known to every informed Southerner that one who opposes, questions or criticizes any President branded, like a cow in the woods, with the designation "Democrat" commits an unpardonable sin, and is looked upon as a traitor to all that is sacred and holy.

Both Mark Wilcox and Dave Sholtz denounced the New Deal, and its activities as viciously, if not more so, than did Landon, Babcock and I in 1936 when we were the respective candidates for President, United States Senator and Governor of Florida, and the combined vote of Wilcox and Sholtz was more than twice as large as we were able to poll two years ago. Instead of the primary showing such a great indorsement of the New Deal, it actually showed that more than twice as many Floridians are opposed to the New Deal now as there were in 1936.

If the statements of Wilcox and Sholtz are to be accepted as fact, then the New Deal not only poured a great deal of money in here in support of Pepper, but it bulldozed and browbeat all the relief and PWA workers to force them to vote for him. The notorious Cone machine, with its thousands of political parasites, liquor and gambling interests, were also instructed to go down the line for Pepper, and were active workers for him.

They held over the people the psychological threat and/or promise that if Pepper were re-elected, they could not only keep their jobs and graft, but that other millions of money plundered from the economic royalists by the Government would continue to pour into Florida, whereas if Pepper were defeated, they would automatically lose their jobs, graft and easy Government money.

It was whispered around among the citrus growers that President Roosevelt had promised to pay the Mediterranean fruit fly damage if Pepper were nominated, whereas this would not be paid if he were defeated. Thousands of letters were sent to the growers suggesting such a thing. If victory won by such tactics is such as to make any thinking American feel elated, then we have sunk so low in honor and patriotism that it will not make much difference who represents us in Washington.

The New Deal has accomplished one very remarkable thing, and that is, it has destroyed all sense of honor and decency in politics.

The Florida results have put the country on notice that it intends to use the money which it has asked from Congress to buy the election this fall in all of the doubtful States.

The Post Impressionist

City Desk.

THE man who wanted to know how long a cat is in labor wasn't the worst; matter of fact, answering that question was a pleasure, it was so original.

No, it's the other birds, the ones who expect you to know everything and often get sore when you sound a little hesitant and irritated, that cause all the trouble. Sometimes I think "city desk" is a misnomer; it should be "information desk." For an ordinary night will bring upwards of 50 of the weirdest questions. Here are a few of those I've had to answer in the last week:

"How many legs has an octopus?" "What's the weather forecast for Philadelphia?" "Is Senator Bridges speaking on the radio tonight? What time and station?" "How many fish did the President catch today?" "Did the Board of Education meet today?" "Do you people pay for news tips? How much?" "Who played opposite Fredric March in 'Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde'?" "Where's the fire? Sirens are sounding all around my neighborhood." "Why are the newsboys yelling 'extra'? Can't you people control them?" "How does America's birth rate compare with the death rate?" "Who wrote the dictionary?" "What boats are sailing from New York today?" "Who's leading in the Florida primaries?" "Do you believe what they say about Nazis in America?" "Tell me the theory behind 'pump-priming'"—etc.

They descend like a cloudburst, these questions. Usually they are worst around deadlines, when the city editor inquires if you are going to make that story a life work, or can we have it for Sunday's late edition after all. The questions above are no exaggeration; you're supposed to be an expert on octopi, a walking sports scoreboard, weatherman for the Eastern seaboard, know the radio programs backwards and hold a Ph. D. in economics-history-sociology-literature and movies.

But the man who wanted to know about his cat was a pleasant break in the monotony of writing about State societies and citizens who drink too fast while driving. When I answered the insistent telephone ring—you get so you recognize that burring after a while—he almost yelled: "How long is a cat in labor?

. . . Yeah, mine's having kittens, been going on for an hour. How much longer will I be kept awake?" Well, you can't refuse a question like that, and somebody around the office opined he'd be awake for another hour. (It's surprising how a stork—even a feline one—breaks up city room routine; self-appointed experts on cats and kittens were holding forth for the next hour.)

But some of the questions make me wonder. The Boss Himself drew the high school student who wanted to know: "What is the theory of pump-priming?" She got a little sore when he said it would take an hour or two to explain, and suggested she read the President's message and follow-up stories in The Post. "Oh, but that's ridiculous," she said. "I haven't got the time. This thesis must be finished by tomorrow night."

Some people call up (particularly at the busiest time) just out of spite, I'm convinced. A lot of them want to settle bets. To them, let me say: POtomac 4300 knows all about the weather—even Philadelphia's; NAtional 4000 knows all about sirens. Any New York paper lists steamship sailings; our copy is no better than those at any newsstands. We, too, wonder why the boys are shouting "extra;" why don't you buy a paper and find out? (If there's anything to it, let us know.) And dictionaries are still the best authority on meanings and spellings of words; anyway, don't you know misspelling (ex) is part of the tradition?

Perhaps the best thing would be to hang up. But every now and then someone asks, "Why are policemen shooting each other in front of my house?" And if we can't tell you the answer then, you'll see it on page one in the morning. And the man who asks, "Why is the ambulance at the White House?" can never make me mad. Then, too, one sure way to lose a reader is to tell him to go to hell, hang up on him.

So come on with your questions; we know all the answers (or we can make them up).

Only three requests. Please don't assume you always are talking to an "editor" when you talk to the city desk; somebody's got to do some work around the office. We aren't all editors. Then, too, take it easy around deadlines. I don't mind looking up the population of Rhodesia—or even finding out what Rhodesia is—if I've got the time.

And will the man with the cat please call back. We all want to know how many kittens there were.

JAMES McCONAUGHY.

Tra-la-la!

Policeman "Jingles" Donahue who wears a uniform of blue in Waterbury, Conn., is noted for his etticut. When motorists park over time he leaves for them this little rhyme:

"Don't park so long in a restricted station. Traffic is hindered by such stagnation. Police request your cooperation to cure a difficult situation. Keep the cars in circulation and give the cop a short vacation.
—Donahue the Cop."

Oh, Donahue, your kindly warning has brightened up our gloomy morning. You've proved that even a patrolman can be a gentle and a droll man. Where other cops resort to curses you seek to get results by verses, in terms that we could not resist were we a Connecticut motorist. Your plea, we think, beyond all question, should serve to remedy congestion, and traffic should move in a hurry upon the streets of Waterbury. And so our hat is off to you, Policeman "Jingles" Donahue!

Fair Enough

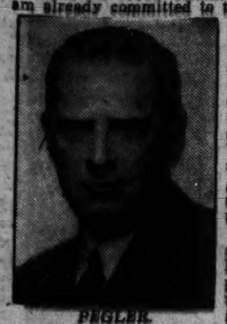
Get Jimmy To Talk.

I SHOULD LIKE to indorse Col. Frank Knox's advice to any self-respecting editor to tell Senator Minton and his lobby committee to go to hell. But I am already committed to the attitude that, inasmuch as the committee has been harassing persons who are said to have lobbied against the Administration, the inquiry should now deal similarly with those mysterious messengers, claiming White House authority, who lobbied for the reorganization bill and for other Administration measures.



PEGLER.

First of all on that list it should summon Jimmy Roosevelt, who was reported to have given private assurances to certain interests that they need not fear that the bill, if passed, would be applied to their detriment. And, inasmuch as the President himself specifically authorized the examination of the income-tax returns of witnesses brought before the committee, Jimmy's own returns, particularly those for the period between his father's election and his own induction into an influential office in the White House, should be examined and broken down.

* * * *

IT SHOULD be established whether Jimmy did important business with corporations and individuals whose interests were so placed that they might have suffered or prospered by any decision of any Government bureau having to do with permits or privileges, such as liquor interests and radio interests. And, in justice to Jimmy himself, who, it is to be hoped, would prove himself innocent of such dealings, the executives of such corporations and such individuals also should be called to give an account of their dealings, if any, under the authority of such Government agencies.

I have heard such inquisitiveness rebuked as an attempt to strike at the President through the conduct of members of his family. That criticism leaves me puzzled, because it seems to imply that a detailed examination of Jimmy's income-tax returns would disclose material which might be used to the President's detriment. I cannot agree with this assumption, preferring to believe that there has been nothing questionable or unethical in Jimmy's business affairs and that he would be able to prove that there wasn't.

This talk of an attempt to strike at the President through a member of his family appears to me to convict Jimmy without a hearing and to bespeak a determination to cover up conduct which might embarrass the President. What kind of honesty is that? Obviously, if Jimmy's business dealings have been innocent of pressure or the exploitation of the great popular mandate, as it has been called, no revelation of the details could cause his father any political or personal discomfort. And certainly there is no less reason to examine Jimmy's income-tax returns than those of other persons, hostile to the New Deal, who were able to vindicate themselves.

As to whether Jimmy could be regarded as a lobbyist I see no doubt. Washington is full of lobbyists. The most spontaneous argument or mere discussion of a pending issue between a citizen and a statesman or a bureau man in which the citizen attempts to press his views on the other may be regarded as lobbying.

* * * *

MEN AND WOMEN lobby in the cocktail room and the dining room of the Mayflower Hotel, at parties and dinners and, indeed in the White House. I have seen in the President's private office Mr. Charles Michelson, who holds, or did hold at my last information on the subject, a commission from a big radio company. I have to remark that there are many corporations which would wish to place a representative in the White House with latchkey privileges and that at least one citizen questions the propriety of this.

This lobby committee is within its rights so far as I can see, but I don't see that it has shown any intention to exercise the same rights in the direction of other lobbyists who, in consistency, should be called.

Moreover, although it may violate a house rule of the most exclusive gentlemen's club in the world, as the Senate has been called, this committee can't acquit itself of watch-hanging until it calls up every member of the Senate to tell under oath who lobbied him for, as well as against, the bill and what promises and threats were uttered, and by whom, to induce him to vote for it.

I wouldn't tell the committee to go to hell.

I would say: "Get Jimmy Roosevelt in here with his income-tax returns and put him over the same jumps that you are trying to put me over. I'll take any jump he'll take."

Jimmy seems to be our first bashful Roosevelt.

China's New Wings

Second Air Force Now In Existence By Chiang Kai-shek Expected To Play Big Part In Outcome Of The War.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

LOCKED IN a deadly combat with a foe that neither asks for nor gives quarter, China today pins her hopes of eventual victory on guerrilla warfare and aviation. Guerrillas have already proved their mettle. Chinese airmen still have to demonstrate their worth.

China entered the hostilities last August with the conviction that her air force of about 200 first-line planes, piloted by American-trained youngsters, was capable of giving Japan a sound thrashing.

Disillusionment came within 24 hours of the outbreak of fighting in Central China. In a futile and unsuccessful attempt to sink the 30-year-old flagship of the Japanese fleet in Shanghai, Chinese fliers accidentally bombed the Foreign Settlement, killing and maiming about 4,000 of their co-nationals.

The famed "Bloody Saturday" was immediately followed by Japanese mass air raids on major Chinese cities. In none of these attacks did the raiders encounter any serious resistance from Chinese aircraft.

Within a week, Japanese naval airplanes were in complete command of the air, although lone Chinese raiders continued to pay occasional nocturnal visits to the Whangpoo River with its irresistible magnet, the obsolete cruiser Izumo.

By the third month of the war, the Chinese air force was practically nonexistent. To the frightening toll collected by Japanese air armadas were added scores of machines wrecked by Chinese fliers in clumsy landing or inexpert piloting.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, president of the aeronautical commission and wife of China's "strong man," began a resurrection of the air force in October. Contracts were signed galore with foreign plane manufacturers, new landing fields were built in the interior of the country, and arrangements were made with Soviet Russia for aerial assistance.

Gradually, China's air force began to expand again, but at first without any appreciable effect upon the fortunes of war. The main cause of this was rooted in the division of the force into three groups virtually independent of each other and, on occasions, of Mme. Chiang as well.

Foreign Fliers Not All Up To Snuff.

THE LEAST efficient of the groups was the Chinese contingent, newly recruited to replace the airmen killed in combat and in accidents. These youngsters—trained at newly organized aviation schools by foreign instructors—were sent up as soon as they knew how to handle a plane.

The second section comprised the much-publicized "Fourteenth Bombardment Squadron," consisting of about a dozen foreign pilots, commanded by Vincent Schmidt, a soldier of fortune and an ace flier who had previously served with the Spanish Loyalists.

China's experience with foreign pilots was disheartening. Hired abroad at fabulous salaries, many of these men were found, on their arrival in China, to be adventurers out for a free trip across the Pacific. A few others were too old to fly and were assigned to training schools.

The remainder, banded together into the now famous "Foreign Legion," were apparently worth their salt. Friction, however, soon developed between them and the government over monetary matters. Professional jealousy between the "Legionnaires" and the Chinese and Soviet fliers was also in evidence.

On March 1, the government not unexpectedly announced the disbandment of the squadron. Some of its members were rehired as instructors. Most, including Schmidt, were discharged. On his way back to Europe, he told reporters in Singapore a few days ago that Chinese planes and fliers were inferior to the Japanese and bitterly criticized Mme. Chiang's "hysterical orders."

The last section was the Soviet air force, reportedly consisting of only 100 machines, but said to be rapidly growing. Since January, this group has given a good account of itself in air combat with the foe and in constant raids upon Japanese troops and positions.

Secrecy shrouds the terms upon which Russia agreed to supply planes to China. In transactions of this type, financial considerations usually play a minor role. Rumors have it that Moscow had granted China ten-year credits for the purchase of aircraft.

Soviet Planes Too Fast For Chinese Conditions.

THREE TYPES of Soviet-made planes have thus far been used in China. These were the I-15 and I-16 fighters, the SB light bombers and biplane pursuit craft. The first of these were brought to China in large numbers, apparently because they form a sizable portion of the Soviet air force.

Extremely fast (better than 300 m. p. h.), these machines were found to be unsuitable in Chinese conditions because of their poor maneuverability and high landing speed, which had resulted in numerous crashes.

Experience in China has shown that in dog fights, which feature the Sino-Japanese aerial warfare, victory is scored not by the faster machine but by an easily manageable plane capable of getting first on the inside of a circle. Considerably slower than Russian aircraft, Japanese machines were found to possess this badly needed maneuverability.

As a result, the I-15's and the still faster I-16's did not fare well in dog fights. Many machines—according to one American observer, a fourth of all the Soviet fighters—were also put out of commission in landing on badly surfaced Chinese airfields.

The pursuit bi-planes, which partly replaced the I-type, were much more successful in combats with Japanese raiders. The best of the Soviet machines, however, were the all-metal SB light bombers, which, in addition to fulfilling their primary function, were sufficiently fast to outspeed Japanese pursuit planes.

Usually manned by a Russian pilot and two machine-gunners, one of whom was a Russian, these aircraft staged numerous raids upon Japanese positions and airfields, inflicting heavy damage. Such successful attacks are known to have been made on airdromes in Nanking, Wuhu and Hangchow, in each of which numerous Japanese machines were destroyed.

The main difficulty with the Soviet contingent was its adamant refusal to obey orders from the Chinese command, to allow Chinese to fly their planes and to participate in co-ordinated air-and-land operations.

Although paid by the national government (reputedly U. S. $80 monthly), Soviet fliers were directed by their commanders, who reportedly mapped out their raids independently of the Chinese general staff. From the Chinese point of view, this independence greatly diminished the value of the Soviet fliers, despite their undoubted courage and skill.

Mme. Chiang Has Done Fine Job.

THE RUSSIAN force has its headquarters in the former Japanese Club in Hankow. It is reported to consist of about 300 fliers and mechanics, all of whom were flown to China from Russia across the Chinese Turkestan. Soviet squadrons are now stationed in Lanchow, Hankow and Nanchang. The first two cities have now become China's aviation centers, and both have assembly plants at which Soviet planes are put together.

The importance of the Russian contingent is bound to grow by leaps and bounds. Among the reasons for this is London's flirtation with the Fascist powers, including Japan, and the ever-tightening blockade of China's maritime and southern borders.

Simultaneously with the disbandment of the "Foreign Legion" on March 1, the government announced the replacement of Mme. Chiang by her brother, T. V. Soong, American-educated former minister of finance and a leading member of the powerful "Soong Dynasty."

Other reforms, left without the benefit of official publicity, included a campaign to root out corruption in the purchasing department, a change in the strategy of the air force, and, apparently, a closer understanding with the Soviet fliers.

Mme. Chiang has done brilliant work in making China "air-conscious" prior to the outbreak of hostilities. When the war began, however, the manifold responsibilities of running an important arm of China's war machine proved to be beyond her physical and psychological capacity.

It is still too early to pass judgment on Mr. Soong's house-cleaning in the aeronautical affairs commission. A few of the more rapacious grafters are known to have been quietly removed from proximity to aviation funds. The purchase of aircraft was taken out of the hands of the Central Trust.

At present it seems that the Chinese air force is on the up-swing, mainly because of the assistance being given by Soviet Russia. And in a strong air force China sees a promise of success for her plan of protracting resistance to Japan until the latter, in sheer exhaustion, gives up the struggle.

Canal Cutter

By William Franklin Sands

A Frenchman In Panama.

PANAMA HAS ALWAYS attracted to itself the most picturesque of the world's adventurers. The isthmus has always thrown up great dynamic figures of romance, for good or for evil, whether as Spanish explorers, or the spoilers of Inca gold, or of the Spice Islands of the Pacific; whether the British and French buccaneers who preyed on both; whether in the later gold rush of California in 1849, or in the great adventures of the French canal company, the long struggle and victory over yellow fever and the final triumph of American doctors and engineers.

The canal project itself is no new thing for Americans. Benjamin Franklin was enormously interested in it—and curiously enough, through a French convict who wrote to him about it from his prison, over his convict's number as signature, while Franklin was at the French court at Versailles.

That whole long romantic chronicle has not yet been assembled in one book, although it is as worthy of a good author as is Emil Ludwig's 'Life Story of the Nile." Our material for it has been, in the main, the dry technical reports of the canal commission or of the sanitation corps in its titanic struggle with disease. Heretofore we have shied away from the political side and from the conspiracies which forced Theodore Roosevelt to "take Panama." We have not been willing yet to write quite frankly about our own part in the canal and in Panama against their European and South American background.

* * * *

MY OWN CONVICTION is that this reticence has played a large part in developing the current situation in the Far East, for the Japanese have certainly taken what they thought they saw us doing on the isthmus and in Central America as an acceptable model for what they wish to do in Korea, Manchuria and northern China. Perhaps it is due to a beginning of realization of that fact that interest is reappearing in the relation of the Panama Canal and its defense, to the stability of Europe and the Far East. An American naval officer, Commander Miles Duval, has just completed a book, a history of the Isthmian Canal war from the year 1511. The 78-year-old Philippe Bunau-Varilla, one of the great adventurers of Panama, has a long series of books and treaties on the subject ("Panama: Creation, Destruction and Resurrection;" "The Great Adventure of Panama: Its Essential Role in the Defeat of Germany," etc.) to which he has just added this present one, his "Battles for France."

Engineers, as "men of science" as "men who deal with facts" are always a little inclined to look down their noses at politicians, financiers and diplomats even when they profit by them. Frenchmen, in general, are at least as intolerant of the lesser breeds as any proverbial Englishman. A Frenchman, made chief engineer of the Panama Canal at the age of 26 would not run quite true to form if he did not give the impression that he accomplished the canal, alone against the world, including his own government, its politicians, diplomats, bureaucrats and speculators, or the obtuseness and incompetence of English and Dutch contractors, and always conscious of the dire machinations of "Germany" to bring about the destruction of French enterprise and morale and to checkmate America.

* * * *

THE AUTHOR IS OUTSPOKEN about the corruption in high (French) places which led to the Panama scandal, but he is certain that Germany's hand manipulated it in preparation for war. We may well be sympathetic, however, to his claim that he alone carried through the enterprise to its American completion, for the vindication and glory of France. Bunau-Varilla was truly the embodiment of that force which revived the dead and bankrupt De Lesseps Co., overcame the inertia of bureaucracy (always a strong tendency in French affairs, survived the menace of graft and corruption and dared the fatality of yellow fever, for which, at that time, there was no cure. Defeated by the tawdry debacle of the new financing in France just at the moment when "he had proved the possibility of accomplishment," he turned to Russia, to England, even to Germany and finally "set the United States in the place of France," a century and a quarter after Benjamin Franklin's great vision. He became the arch-conspirator to turn the United States from Nicaragua to Panama, and to detach Panama from Colombia.

His part in the World War, which left him maimed but as buoyant and fiery as ever, is interesting, too, but rather as illustrating the enormous energy which drove him to accomplish his life's work, the canal, with which he saw bound up the national fate of France, even though it had to be done vicariously.

His English translation of this book, which he has prepared, should find an American publisher.

"FROM PANAMA TO VERDUN—MY BATTLES FOR FRANCE," by Philippe Bunau-Varilla. Paris: Librairie Plon, 1937.

"Never Would Be Missed"

"THE GILBERT AND SULLIVAN OPERAS: A CONCORDANCE," by Frederick J. Halton. (Base Publishers, $2.)

THERE IS NOTHING in KoKo's little list about people who write books explaining other people's jokes, but had W. S. Gilbert lived to see his allusions analyzed as they are in Mr. Halton's concordance he might conceivably have concluded this author among those who never would be missed. The erudite author informs us, for example, that "King Arthur was a semifabulous British hero," that "the Congo and the Niger are rivers in Africa," that "Raphael was a famous Italian painter," and that "music halls are public places for vaudeville performances." Mr. Halton may present some matters of possible interest, but not many. The book would have been far more appealing had the more obvious allusions been omitted and the discussion of the others less pedantic. Altogether Gilbert's wit is not so dead nor his audience so stupid as Mr. Halton seems to consider them.

Bibliophile Into Archeologist

Albert Rhys Williams, author of "The Soviets," has written from loyalist Spain about a well known Valencia publisher and bibliophile whose home recently was destroyed by a nationalist bomb. "Since then," according to Williams, "the old man has been digging up the ruins to retrieve what he can. Yesterday he uncovered the library, or rather the place where it once was, and began salvaging some of his choice books. Over each volume he found in the plaster and debris he exclaimed with delight. When he found his old Racine and Cervantes he almost danced with joy. Late into the night he carried on his treasure hunt. He was experiencing all the emotions of an old book collector amassing a new library, volume by volume. The familiar thrills all over again."

Valuable Reference Work

"WHITE'S CONSPECTUS OF AMERICAN BIOGRAPHY." (James T. White & Co., $15.)

The publishers have produced this new and valuable conspectus—the first since 1906—in celebration of their fiftieth anniversary as inheritors of the work begun by James Terry White. The new work is of vast advantage to librarians, researchers and students of American history. The book contains adequate biographical sketches of virtually all prominent Americans from the time of the First Continental Congress to the present day. Best of all, the material is intelligently and adequately indexed.

Gibson and Frazier Consider Quitting Lobby Committee

By the Associated Press

Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, declaring the "usefulness of the Senate Lobby Committee is over," said yesterday he and Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, were considering resigning from the committee.

Referring to the group's refusal to permit Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, to testify last week concerning the financing of his magazine Rural Progress, Gibson said the committee action was "an indirect attack on the freedom of the press."

He declared the duty of the committee, headed by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, was "finding out the truth with respect to lobbying operations in connection with legislation."

"When an attempt is made to make capital for the benefit of any one political party, its usefulness is at an end," Gibson declared.

Visiting Nurse Society Aided 4,325 in April

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the U. S. Supreme Court Justice, presided at the May meeting of the board of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, held yesterday at headquarters office, 810 Albee Building.

At the gathering George Hewitt Myers, chairman of the finance committee, presented a tentative budget for 1939. The work of the organization through April took care of 4,325 patients, to whom 15,286 visits were made. Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, executive director, reported.

Appointment.

Roy Blough, Ph. D., associate professor in the department of economics, University of Cincinnati, has been appointed Director of Tax Research in the Treasury Department, effective June 1. His experience has been broad—before associating with the university Dr. Blough had become well known as a writer on tax problems. He was associate director of a tax study recently completed by the Twentieth Century Fund and co-author of the resulting book titled "Facing the Tax Problem." He is chairman of the committee on social security legislation and administration of the National Tax Association and has acted as consultant to the Bureau of Research and Statistics of the SSB . . .

The Non-Classified Federal Employes of America have sent out a flyer declaring: "We have 30,000 non-classified employes in the District of Columbia alone. These people we beg to cooperate and join our association at once. June 30 is drawing near and we have a big task before us—fighting for that non-competitive examination to make our jobs secure . . ." Incidentally, the regular meeting of the Non-Classified Federal Employes Association will be held at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow evening at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Mail Department.

We received the following interesting communication from Harry G. Ritner, an employe of the GAO and editor of the Washington Federal Bulletin:

"Several months ago your column was utilized to foretell what could be expected from the very popular chairman of the Civil Service committee, Robert Ramspeck. Since then, his vigorous efforts championing Civil Service has surely confirmed my beliefs. Now I should like to point out another prominent member of the Civil Service committee. Representative William L. Sirovich, of New York. He may be said to have been the modern spearhead to improve Civil Service.

"While I have never met the distinguished gentleman, the records show him an outstanding champion of the underdog. To Dr. Sirovich goes the honor of creating the atmosphere to make Federal employes 'work conscious.' Prior to 1935 nothing important occurred to make employes think about working conditions, pay, efficiency ratings and similar matters.

"But when he introduced (H. R. 9980) omnibus civil service bill and following questionnaires to all Federal employes, the entire Federal service began thinking of possible improvements. While it is true that nothing ever came about (H. R. 9980) in the form of legislation, the groundwork had been planted to make employes conscious of matters dear to the hearts of themselves and families.

"Dr. Sirovich is the first legislator to introduce a bill creating a board of appeals to handle employe complaints. The bill was passed by the House, but was stricken out by the Senate when found attached to the bill creating the NRA.

"Whenever he requests time to make a speech, it may be assured that he will have a good audience. With an unusually brilliant mind, it is not unusual for Dr. Sirovich to speak for one hour without any notes. A scholar of Biblical history, he is a great reader, and above all a champion of the underdog; and he always can be depended upon to make himself heard when the welfare of Federal employes is involved."

Guards ..... Lansing Feele and Ernest Jones

For a group of students, most of them in their late teens or early twenties, it is a brave thing to attempt an opera, especially the none too simple "Rigoletto." However, last evening in the Wardman Park Theater the Webster Studio Group came off as well as could be expected. The opera, with a piano and violin as orchestra, moved smoothly and the students, encouraged by a full house, warmed to their task as the evening progressed.

Although in the "Questa Quella" of the first act Mr. Seate's Duke sang with a thin tone, by the time for "La Donne e Mobile" he was in fuller voice. Mrs. Coffey negotiated the high E flat of Caro Nome carefully and successfully. Gilda, in the latter part of the opera sung by Miss Durst, produced some encouragingly full top notes for so young a voice, and with time and skillful training, she may appear to great advantage. The youthful Mr. Jones was the hunchback of the first half while the more experienced Mr. Drinkard appeared in the tragic closing scenes. Mrs. Hilker as Giovanna showed a fine full tone in her brief lines, and Mr. Ferry's Sparafucile had some resounding bass tones. Miss Hurley gave color and warmth to Madda lena.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Song recital by Henriette Bagger Plum in the Sulgrave Club Tuesday night, with Mildred Kolb Schulze at the piano. Program: "Er, der Herrlichste von allen," "Du bist wie eine Blume" (Schumann), "Von ewiger Liebe," "Maedchenlied" (Brahms), "Morgen," "Zueignung" (Richard Strauss), "Gerechter Gott" from "Rienzi" (Wagner), "Bois Epais" from "Amadis de Gaule" (Lully), "La Statue de Tsarskoe-Selo" (Cui), "Il mio bel fuoco" (Marcello), "Care il mio bambin" (Guarnieri), "God Is My Shepherd" (Dvorak), "Time Was When I in Anguish Lay" (Griffes), "Skin ud, du klare Solskin" (Lange-Mueller), "Det foerste Kyss et," "Svarta Rosor" (Sibelius).

That friendly rapport which a small auditorium establishes between artist and listener was conducive to the pleasantness of the recital by Henriette Bagger Plum last evening in the Sulgrave Club. The Danish mezzo-soprano presented a program fairly balanced between familiarity and novelty, and her readings showed a musical intelligence that enhanced one's enjoyment of the songs. Her style was emotionally restrained, placing more emphasis upon accents in phrasing than upon dramatic power.

Mme. Plum's voice has the true soprano timbre with an extended lower range, but it lacks the chatoyante quality one associates with a mezzo; the deeper tones are still soprano in their color. Her intonation is accurate and her placement secure, although the tone is not always equally sustained on the breath. Essentially a lyric singer, she was at her best in those songs which call for delicacy of attack and tenderness of tone. The Wagnerian aria from "Rienzi," while well motivated artistically, was the least effective of her selections.

Her introductory group of lieder was made interesting by the inclusion of the seldom-heard and delightful "Maedchenlied" of Brahms and the second song from Schumann's Frauenliebe-und-Leben" cycle. One regretted that Richard Strauss, who has written more than a hundred songs, should have again been represented by two of the most hackneyed, "Morgen" and "Zueignung."

Cesar Cui's "La Statue de Tsarskoe-Selo" proved how thoroughly Gallic this Franco-Russian composer could be. In the same group was a charming lullaby by Guarneri, "Care il mio bambin." The concluding group began with the utterly simple and moving setting of "The Lord Is My Shepherd" from Dvorak's "Ten Biblical Songs," which are sadly neglected.

ConcertSetTonight ByRubinstein Club

Under the direction of Claude Robeson, the Rubinstein Club of women's voices will give its last concert of the season this evening in the Willard Hotel ballroom. Assisting artists are Earl Weatherford, tenor, and a trio from the National Symphony Orchestra, consisting of Herbert Bangs, violinist; Howard Mitchell, 'cellist, and Sol Sax, pianist.

The choral numbers are announced as follows: "Since First I Met Thee" (Rubinstein), "Come, Lassies and Lads" (arr. Fletcher), "Bells of Shandon" (Seymour), "The Staines Morris" (arr. Fletcher), "The Winds" (Mertis), "Mandoline" (Debussy-Spross), "Spring Pastoral" (Mary Howe).

Earl Weatherford will assist the club as soloist in the Mertis number, and will also be heard in two groups of songs: "Che gelida manina" (Puccini), "Sigh No More" ((Aiken), "Go, Lovely Rose" (Quilter), "The First Bluebird" (Davis), "The Postern Gate" (Branscombe), "A Dream" (Grieg), "A Memory" (Ganz), "The Pipes of Gorden's Men" (Hammond) and "The Sound of the Sea" (Ronald).

The instrumentalists will contribute movements selected from trios by Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert and Arenski. The Rubinstein Club will be accompanied by Adele Robinson Bush.

New Samuel Goldwyn Production Is Executed in Grand Manner and Is Handsomely Cast; Mr. Meredith and Miss Gish on the Air; the Roadside to Present an American Premiere; Hats Cause Backfire.

DURING the slow-moving early sequences of the picture, the impression is apt to be gained that Samuel Goldwyn, in "The Adventures of Marco Polo," has produced merely an animated rotogravure section. But when the final developments of the story have been reached there is a different tale to tell. The thing goes Cecil B. De Mille in a big way, with milling action, hundreds—or may be it is thousands—of supernumeraries taking part in the turbulent battle scenes and all Hades breaking loose.

BELL

This is the pretentious item that stars Gary Cooper and introduces a new leading woman in the person of Sigrid Gurie, an exotic "importation"—from Brooklyn, by way of Norway or Sweden, I believe—who seems to live up to all of the boasts that the eminent Mr. Goldwyn has made about her. She doesn't show quite the emotional fire of Zorina, introduced in "The Goldwyn Follies," but she smoulders effectively through a considerable footage of the present film.

It seemed to me at yesterday afternoon's preview of this subject, in the sweltering bandbox theater of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, that the "Great Goldwyn" had wasted a good deal of time in getting started, but that first reaction was largely overcome by the violence of those closing scenes of the drama.

The whole thing, of course, is pitched back 700 years into the Thirteenth Century and maybe they didn't move so swiftly in those days. At any rate, Robert E. Sherwood, one of the foremost of the current theater's playwrights, has fabricated a yarn that hangs together both dramatically and emotionally. Mr. Goldwyn has cast the piece with a fine eye to solid effect. Basil Rathbone, Ernest Truex, Alan Hale, H. B. Warner, George Barbier and all the rest are not to be cast off lightly.

A great many future audiences at Loew's Palace Theater, where the picture opens on Friday, probably will think they have something to send to Ripley when it is divulged that Marco Polo, the handsome young Venetian, discovered spaghetti, gunpowder, firecrackers and coal out there in China in 1200-and-something. That part of the fictional story seems to be completely factual. All right, look it up!

"The Adventures of Marco Polo," in addition to being executed on a gigantic scale, is photographed in a sepia tint—not to be confused with natural color photography—that lends the whole sweep of the action a visual beauty that is seldom approached. This is the sort of thing, it will be remembered, that was done in filming "Maytime"—not by Mr. Goldwyn.

In view of the present situation in China, it will be interesting to many to hear from the screen in "Marco Polo" how easy Kublai Khan thinks it will be to conquer the little island nation of Japan. A typhoon or two saw to that, unfortunately.

It might have been better for the Celestial Empire if Kublai Khan's plans had gone through as he laid them out—instead of as he was laid out by them!

Preceding the unspooling of "Marco Polo" yesterday afternoon, there was shown a Pete Smith short-reel subject called "Modeling for Money," in which the glib and humorous Mr. Smith expatiated wittily upon the difficulties of getting a job as a professional model on the "big time." This is a girly sort of thing, as goes practically without saying, and reveals the fact that to be a successful model a young woman needs to have something more than a pair of legs. She has, for example, to know how to walk on them and a few other things that aspirants for a place in the sun in this line of work ought to be glad to know. Learning how to "model for money" amounts almost to a college course in co-ordination and muscular control. I imagine Pete had a lot of fun making this one! At any rate, he had a lot of girls. But they are not always fun.

I never heard of Burgess Meredith being in musical comedy, or any other type of stage musical. There seems to be no reason why he shouldn't have been, for in "The Star-Wagon," current at the National Theater, he sings a couple of hymns and "The Holy City" in surprisingly good voice.

"The Holy City" may be a little too far back in the book for a good many of the present-day audiences, but I remember it as the best song sung on the Masonic Temple Roof, in Chicago, by the "Girl With the Auburn Hair," an annual summer attraction that used to corral $1,000 a week for her services, a fabulous sum back there about the turn of the century.

Mr. Meredith isn't the "Girl with the Auburn Hair," but he does well enough!

Incidentally, both Mr. Meredith and Lillian Gish, his costar in the Anderson play, will be heard over the air tonight through WRC on the program conducted by our old collmate, Tom McCarthy. Mr. McCarthy will interview these two eminent players and without doubt will elicit from them something of interest that you will be glad to hear. The program participated in by these two will take the other at 11:15 p. m. and run until midnight. Miss Gish and Mr. Meredith will be heard sometime during that period, precisely when, I wouldn't know. Neither, probably would Mr. McCarthy.

Word comes from a reliable source that Ian Hay's play of "The Frog," from the Edgar Wallace novel, will be presented for the first time in America by the Roadside Theater Company this summer.

This mystery "thriller" was presented for more than a year in London and was played through the provinces by three additional road companies. A motion picture version, with Noah Beery and Gordon Harker, who starred in the original London run, is now in course of production by Gaumont British as one of their major offerings for the ensuing year.

The dramatist, Ian Hay, is currently represented in this country by his comedy hit, "Bachelor Born," now in its fifth month at the Lyceum Theater in New York.

"The Frog," is said to combine mystery, suspense, romance, comedy and action in proportions that have been proved in the past to provide the Roadside with the most satisfactory outlet for its acting talents.

Boy, am I being "beaten down" and having my ears slapped back by the irate members of the not-so-gentle sex who resent my disrespectful remarks concerning their crazy hats. Sorry, but I still think some of the things that are worn into theaters on the heads of women—and kept on—are a symbol of the gender's subtle yen for inflicting a sort of silent torture on the weaker sex. Women are like that—so I hear!

There will be one of those "two-for-the-price-of-one" bills at the Belasco Theater on Friday night of this week, when Nova Pilbeam's next picture, "The Girl Was Young," will be presented, in preview, as an added attraction with "To the Victor," the current feature on Lafayette Square.

Following the Friday night "double-feature bill," the Pilbeam film will be the chief feature of the Belasco's program. But on this one last Friday night show you will be able to catch two features with only one price of admission. That should mean something in these days.

Don't-We-Have-Fun Note.

And so away to that columnist's banquet and the beauty judging—and how I hate it!

Swelling Down; Ameche Returns

Although his infected left jaw still pains him, Don Ameche, noted star, has recovered sufficiently from the facial swelling to report to the set of Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Don was stricken during a scene. An infection, believed to have been caused by a minor cut from a tooth brush bristle, caused his face to start swilling so rapidly he had to be taken out of the film by Director Henry King and sent home.

WeaverSpends Idle TimeAidingFriend

When she's not working in "Kentucky Moonshine," in which she is featured with the Ritz Brothers and Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver has been keeping shop for her friend, Patsy Brogan, who is home taking care of her ill 3-year-old son, Pat.

When Marjorie was called to the studio, she solved the problem by standing in for herself and sending her stand-in- Judy Parks, to look after the dress shop for Patsy, who don't trust her young son to a nurse.

Makes Debut in Exotic Film Role

who appears as the Princess Kukachin, opposite Gary Cooper, in Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," soon to be seen at Loew's Palace Theater. The smouldering Miss Gurie maker her first American screen appearance surrounded by a cast of genuine distinction. Basil Rathbone, Ernest Truex, Alan Hale, George Barbier, Binnie Barnes, H. B. Warner and many more of equal rank are importantly assigned.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., May 10.—With most of our maidens longing for an evening with some romantic lover of the screen, my advice is, if you can't snare one of them, try to get a comedian. I was lucky in dining with Roland Young—with Bob Benchley and Charlie Butterworth joining us, at the Troc. If that isn't a trio of laugh makers I never saw any.

HEDDA HOPPER

Roland Young is playing in "Young in Heart," in which he has Billie Burke again for his wife. He says it's a grand part—an unscrupulous scoundrel who would steal candy from babies. But all done in that gentlemanly Young manner, of course.

Byt the way, you'll be denied the pleasure of seeing Maude Adams in the picture. She took tests which were excellent, then said she believed she was too dominant for the character. The idea of sweet, gentle Maude Adams being dominant is funny in itself. Perfect for Dame May Whitty. But why not give our own darling Margaret Seddens a chance? You may remember her as one of the pixilated sisters in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." She had a run of good luck after that, but for the moment, forgotten.

Bob Benchley is one of the really great funny men of our generation. In his writing, acting, inventing, constant good humor and fair play. I was with Alexander Woollcott at a newspaper shindig at the old Majestic Hotel in New York the first time Bob read his "treasurer's report." The look of surprise and delight at its success made such an imprint on his features he still wears it.

Throwing up his job as editor of Vanity Fair, when that magazine fired Dorothy Parker for daring to criticize a Belasco show in her own inimitable manner, won him respect from all. Imagine if our producers had that power today!

He's here doing nine more "shorts" for Metro, with "An Evening Alone" all ready for release. His elder son, who wrote this year's "Hasty Pudding" show and has been a contributor to the Harvard Lampoon, graduates this month from Harvard. The younger goes from Exeter to Harvard next fall.

Charlie Butterworth has lost that lean, hungry Cassius look, in spite of the fact that he parted with what I'd consider a fortune, in settlement with his wife, Ethel.

He's all rested from a trip abroad—my, how these comics travel!—and ready for new worlds to conquer. And—I have no doubt, new wives.

Looks to me as though Merle Oberon's motor accident and subsequent lawsuit, which went against her to the tune of $35,000, was a blessing in disguise. Rumors have reached me from London that it saved Korda's job with that English company. The accident gave them time to look over what they'd done on "I, Claudius"—and they decided to throw the whole thing out, which saved millions.

I'm hoping the Ernst Lubitsches won't take off for England until after the blessed event. The baby shower was given here, and I think we should have the first look at the little stranger.

The battle over whether blonde Ilsa Lacosta paid to play Cleopatra in the WPA theater is a tempest in a teapot. Why isn't the spotlight turned on why a German actress got the part in the first place? And why the Federal Theater here is supposed to lose $60,000 a month or get no more money from the New Deal for that project? Or shouldn't one ask silly questions?

Slipper Bouquets For Mary Maguire

In tune with the romantic mood of spring, Mary Maguire, who plays in "Mysterious Mr. Moto," launches a pretty evening fashion by wearing tiny bouquets of flowers on some of her evening slippers. Selected for the toes of pumps matching a gown of azure-blue chiffon are pale pink camellias set off by minute sprays of lilies of the valley. The flowers are necessarily artificial, since real ones would not survive an evening of dancing.

Troika Offers New Show as It Closes Season

Walter Winchell Arrives at the Shoreham This Week With Ice Carnival.

By Chanticleer

The Russian Troika will close Saturday. This Connecticut avenue supper club has a brand new all-Russian show to present as the finale to its season. A burlesque of Othello created by Vovo Prozenko, mingling Shakespeare tragedy with gypsy music, is a feature of the new show. The chef, incidentally, has prepared some unique Russian dishes.

Almost overshadowing the International Ice Carnival at the Shoreham is the arrival of Walter Winchell at that hotel this week. In case you have forgotten, it was Walter Winchell who gave the blue room at the Shoreham its name.

Tonight Walter and his bevy of Washington's ten most beautiful girls will be guests of the Hi-Hat. He is scheduled to make an early appearance. Oscar Altman, host at the Hi-Hat, has found the new policy, initiated last week, of "daylight saving" popular.

All the gaiety you heard coming out of the Willard's Blue Grotto this morning was the Early Bird's Breakfast Club entertaining a well-known columnist and his proud beauties. The host of the Willard, Harry Somerville, led the singing—and with a brand-new grandson, just christened, he has reason to burst forth into song.

The Lotus is featuring an entire New Broadway Ensemble this week. The chorus of dancing darlings is featured in a novel "Swing It" number. Dorothy Cleveland in a specialty, the Taras and Masters with a snappy ballroom number, and Warren and Marjorie in an original fast tap dubbed "Circus" share honors in the show. Buddy Shaner is featured in this week's revues and, of course, Al Norton is on hand as master of ceremonies. Bill Strickland's orchestra incidentally has gone into the swing band group and henceforth will be known as the Bill Strickland's Dixieland Swing Band.

Ray Herbeck opened at the Glen Echo Spanish Garden Ballroom Monday and features such entertainers as Shirley and Joe Martin. Ray, as you know, is the California "Southpaw" who became "mad about music" and organized his own band. He won the Rudy Vallee Cup for sweet music last year.

The Bamboo Gardens offers Leo Lissee his first bit of vocalizing since he took charge as M. C. The show booked this week features the aero skating duo and the dancers, Virginia and Arthur Durante. It is a show with lavish dance music and spectacular dance routines.

The latest news from the Madrillon is that members of the band soon will be blossoming into summer uniforms. The uniforms will be of Windsor blue. May 15 means the last of the Madrillon Sunday dinners. During the summer the Madrillon will close on Sundays.

Helen Greene, who has been popular with the King Cole patrons, sings her swan song in a few days—the reason being that she will be married shortly.

The Pall Mall room closes for the summer season this Saturday. Rumor has it that Mario di Polo, the popular baton waver, will return in the fall to reopen this popular play spot. Although the room doesn't close until Saturday, the last of the special Wednesday nights will be in the nature of a farewell party.

'We Two' Perform in Anchor Room

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The worst thing that a declarer can do is to get rattled because of a bad break. If finesses always succeeded, or if suits always broke, bridge would be a very dull gabe. In the hand shown below, declarer was so disgusted about a bad trump break that he failed to see a splendid chance whereby that break might be offset.

Bothe sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, feeling he had a sure trump trick, opened the diamond ace. Declarer ruffed and led a club to dummy's queen, in order to take the spade finesse. When East showed out, declarer muttered something uncomplimentary about the law of averages, and went up with the spade ace. Then, apparently convinced that there was no use battling against fate, declarer forced out the spade king by a second lead of trumps. West gladly took the spade king and, on a high heart signal from East, hastily shifted to a heart lead. East's ace spelled the defeat of the slam contract.

That the declarer should have surrendered without a struggle is almost incomprehensible. After getting the bad news about the spade break there was precisely one chance to avoid defeat and that was to get rid of dummy's hearts before surrendering the lead. As the cards lay, this would have been easy. The ace and king of clubs should have been laid down, on the second of which dummy would discard a heart. The lead of a fourth club would now put West up against the wall. If he ruffed with the low spade, dummy would overruff. Declarer then would return to his hand by ruffing a diamond, to lead the fifth club. Now, whether or not West used his high trump for ruffing purposes, dummy could discard its last heart.

Surely there was nothing abstruse or involved about this play, in fact, it is a type which recurs often enough to justify analysis and study by the average player.

Administrators Put Over World Savers by Berle

Says U. S. Must Improve Its Undestanding of Business Problem.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 10.—Undersecretary of State A. A. Berle, jr., declared today the Federal Government must improve its understanding of business problems and replace "world savers" with administrators.

Speaking before a triple convention of the Southern, National and American Supply and Machinery Asssociation, Berle said:

"National responsibility for the national economy was not assumed until 1933, and our Government must improve its methods, its personnel, its understanding of business problems; must cut its red tape, must find administrators, rather than world-savers; must make its regulations at once simple, certain and flexible."

He said, however, the Government could not step aside from "its responsibility" for national economic conditions and was entitled to make certain demands. He continued:

"It (the Government) is entitled to demand that every group consider what contribution it can make, rather than what plunder it can derive. This goes for everybody, without exception; labor unions, trade associations, finance, management. A share in the national income is justified only by work done in creating it."

President Roosevelt's new recovery program in a "nutshell," Berle said, was designed to protect business "from forced sales and distressed goods." Credit, he added, was made "easy" and capital credits made easy to get.

"In a normal course," he added, "such a program 'takes hold' and begins to be visible in not less than 90 days nor more than seven months, although it may 'take hold' a good deal earlier when everyone understands the situation and begins to go forward."

Hospital Day Tomorrow.

Entertainment under the auspices of the D. C. Department of the American Legion Auxiliary will mark National Hospital day tomorrow at Mount Alto Hospital. After the entertainment, which includes dancers from the Virginia C. Hunter School, the disabled veterans will be served refreshments by the legion auxiliary. Charles Kohen arranged the show, which begins at 7:45 p. m.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Son's Wife Is Involved in Romance With Mother-in-Law's Star Boarder; What Can Be Done?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some months ago I took a foreigner into my lovely country home to board. My married son and his wife, both of whom work, live with me. Now this man and my daughter-in-law are fast falling in love with each other and my son is almost frantic. He has started drinking and staying out all night. Neither of us has said anything to the wife, for we are sure it would start a quarrel, if not an actual fist-fight.

* * * *

Should I tell the boarder to leave? I am undecided, thinking she might meet him on the sly. He is a nice man and an agreeable guest in my home, and I can't help thinking it is my daughter-in-law's fault. Yet she has no reason to act this way. She is treated well and has everything she wants, for pleasure and comfort. I would hate to see them separate because of their children, but my son will put her out if he sees much more. HEARTSICK MOTHER.

* * * *

DEAR HEARTSICK MOTHER: Your son and his wife are acting like a pair of fools. She for endangering her marriage in order to indulge herself in a passing flirtation that has no more lasting qualities than a summer storm, and he for permitting the first threat to his married happiness to demoralize him completely. The boarder, of course, must be an out-and-out philanderer, with few if any moral scruples, or he would have packed his bags and left long before the situation attained its present critical status. As it is, he probably reasons that he can always take to his heels, if that seems necessary for saving his skin; and because he supposes his safety does lie in readily accessible flight, he is tempting fate to the limit.

* * * *

As for you, in leaning over backward to give the boarder the benefit of the doubt concerning his innocence, I think you are more animated by financial than really charitable considerations. I think you either need, or want, that bit of income which a paying guest represents so badly that you would prefer to close your eyes to what is going on, if you only could. You haven't the courage to do right for right's sake if, in so doing, it is going to cost you money.

* * * *

As head of the household, and with your son and daughter-in-law temporarily bereft of whatever common sense they ever possessed, it becomes your responsibility to bring the situation to order. By all means ask the boarder to vacate, giving him whatever minimum notice is necessary in order to be strictly fair. Unless he asks for an explanation, give him none. If he does put the question, look him straight in the eye and tell him he has become, as he undoubtedly already knows, a disturbing influence in the house, and that it seems best for him (and for all concerned) that he take up residence as far away as possible, as quickly as possible. Say: "I am sure we understand each other. I see no point in discussing it further."

* * * *

Then, tell your daughter-in-law very firmly that her nonsensical behavior has cost you a paying guest; that you will tolerate no more of it in future; and that, moreover, unless she brings herself up short she may pay for her folly by losing both husband and children.

* * * *

I must say, however, that when a woman is afflicted with a husband so craven and immature as your son seems to be; living with his mother, in the first place; taking to drink at the first major crisis in his life, in the second place; and lacking the courage to tell his wife that he disapproves of her cheap dalliance with a virtual stranger in the third place, she is more or less ripe for exploitation by some unscrupulous interloper; unless, of course, she happens to possess some of those sturdy virtues which her husband lacks. But that seems not to be the truth in this instance.

* * * *

The wife, thinking she is entitled to something better in the way of masculine companionship than her husband affords, is acting in such a way as to prove she has gotten just about what she deserves. In her husband she found her own level—a very imperfect creature—and in the boarder she is merely reaching after a variation of the same thing. If you can balance your budget without them under your roof, the wisest move you could make would be to send all of them packing. M. H.

By Margaret Wallace

May employes of a business organization have a party without inviting wives, husbands and fiances? This is a question asked by a puzzled young woman who has been made chairman of entertainment for the employes' society of one of Washington's business concerns.

"We have luncheons every month, strictly for employes and officials of the company, and the wives and fiances never complain," she writes. "But we are planning a dinner and dance for our spring meeting and a number of the married men have said that they will not be able to come if their wives are not invited.

"Even some of the unattached men who are engaged say they cannot come without the girls they are engaged to. The married women do not want to come without their husbands. Do you think it is necessary to allow outsiders such as husbands and wives and fiances to attend a party intended as a strictly office activity?"

Fiance Problem Difficult.

Of course a dinner and dance is quite a different affair from a midday luncheon given as an interlude in business hours. Parties given by any group of people after business hours are social functions, and therefore it is proper to include the husbands and wives of married members of the group.

The fiance problem is a much more difficult one because it might happen that too many of the unmarried members of the group would want to bring outside guests. It might be well to make a rule that the "fiances" should be limited to those whose engagements actually have been formally announced.

Another girl writes: "I wish to invite my employer to Sunday dinner with my husband and myself. I do not know his wife but my husband thinks I should invite her.

"My employer has expressed a wish to come to my house to see my garden and my husband and my little girl and to "sample" my cooking. It will be a very informal meal as I do not have a maid."

When you invite your employer you could do so verbally and say that you would be glad to include his wife. If he consents then you should write a letter to the wife inviting them and explaining that the function is to be an informal one and that you and your husband look forward to having both of them for Sunday dinner.

A Dark Sheer—Chic and Cool

A DARK dress should be the backbone of every summer wardrobe—but it should be cool as to material and simple as to styling. When you tire of light clothes or a gray day looms up to make all-white ensembles appear a bit out of the picture, a compromise may be reached by choosing a dark sheer with white dots like the smart frock above. It is fashioned of navy sheer with white grosgrain trimming, and combines both navy and white in the accessories. The simple styling has a lot of swing and dash and the gay posies at the belt add effective color contrast.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Distinguished Women.

This column, which has as good a right as anyone to choose the ten most distinguished women of the year, presents the following list:

MRS. A.—Just a plain housewife, but she graciously took her turn at bank windows and bargain sales, in cafeteria and ticket lines. Boarded street cars and buses without going native. When her children got in rows with those of her neighbors she did not insist that the other children "started it."

MISS B.—Worked the entire year in an office without getting into a controversy with anyone over the opening or shutting of windows or the location of the fans. When she made a mistake she did not comb the building for someone else to blame. When she changed jobs she did not lie in wait to pounce on her successor's errors. Never joined the "Poor Little Me" club in the office. Gave all other girls a 50-50 break before the ladies' room mirror.

MRS. C.—Served as the family chauffeur 365 days without hogging the road or making mystifying signals with her arms at crossings. Did not honk constantly at pedestrians or complain that men drivers took advantage of her. Never parked double for "just a few minutes." Never tried to vamp traffic officers. Never remarked how few women there were who could "really handle a car."

MISS D.—Kept her love conquests to herself. Though of average looks she did not complain constantly of the married men who annoyed her and the mashers in motor cars who honked at her. Was never trailed by strange and mysterious men. On becoming engaged she frankly admitted her fiance was making only $40 a week and that none of his forbears came over on the Mayflower.

MRS. E.—Belonged to a club the entire year without taking it too seriously. Saw other women made officers and members of committees without getting out her mud balls. Made 150 ribbon sandwiches for the club tea without complaining that she had to do all the dirty work. Never held up proceedings to have perfectly obvious things explained to her.

MRS. F.—An active political leader, she never once predicted that the womanhood of the country would line up en masse behind her party or its candidate. Never used the terms "thinking women," "constructive," "fundamentals of government," "Americanism" or "moral issues." Never fell into the habit of taking another woman into a whispering huddle to remark that it was a nice day.

MISS G.—As a milliner, she never sold a woman a hat that made her look like a freak. Never assured a customer it was all a matter of "getting used" to the shapes. She could even say—believe it or not—to a customer, "That hat looks perfectly hideous on you."

MRS. H.—She never asked, when a feminine voice inquired over the telephone for her husband, "Who's calling, please?" She never asked him where he was going or who was the strange woman he spoke to. At parties she could listen to him tell his most tiresome or questionable stories without batting an eye.

MRS. I.—Functioned as a society hostess without becoming a patron of the arts. Knew the names and faces of the people she entertained. Always had plenty of chairs and food. Neither courted publicity nor pretended to abhor it. Even worked for the causes to which she lent her name as sponsor.

MRS. J.—Played bridge twice weekly through the entire year without telling her partner how she should have bid. Was sweetly gracious to dumb partners and friendly though not patronizing to strangers. Was never critical of favors or refreshments. And told her gossip straight without circumlocution or apology.

Colored Veils.

Paris (U.P.).—Veils on hats are going to be used in different colors, anything but black. Green, blue or russet make a nice contrast to straw and white panamas. They are round or long and draped in the back of the hat or small enough to come around the chin just like they wore a long time ago. Little women with small faces will wear these.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

TAKE YOUR BATHING suit out of the mothballs and see if you are in form for the beach. Whether you float, paddle or swim, you will spend more time out of the water than in it . . . and you want to look like a bathing beauty.

If your figure runs true to form your thighs will show the ill effects of a season's lazy living. Unlovely thighs are the sign of soft muscles, which, for some preverse reason, show up in either hollows or bulk. The inside of thigh will appear to sink in, while a pincushion of fat sits on the outside of the thigh.

It seems unreasonable to expect the same measure to fill out hollows and smooth down bulges, but that is exactly what exercise will do. Exercise tones the muscles and toned, firm muscles hold the figure to normal, lovely line. That's the whole secret.

Just keep your suit on! It will put you in the mood for special exercises to remold those thighs for the bathing suit season, and the sooner you begin the better. Although its special purpose is to smooth out the fat pads along the thighs, the following exercise will at the same time slim the hips:

POSITION: Lie on the floor on the side, one arm stretched along the floor under the head for a pillow. Brace yourself with the other hand on the floor in front of the body. Have the legs straight out on the floor, one on top of the other.

MOVEMENT: Holding the leg straight, slowly raise it as high in the air as possible. Hold the other leg on the floor. Lower the leg slowly and repeat five times. Turn over on the other side and work on the other thighline for the same number of times. After the first week, increase the number of times you repeat the exercise.

POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor, knees flexed and together.

MOVEMENT: Separate the knees in as wide an excursion as possible. Return to original position and repeat eight times.

For a variation of the same exercise, continue lying on the floor on the back but straighten the legs and let them rest on the floor. Raise legs a few inches off the floor and separate. Bring the legs together and lower to the floor. Repeat five times.

In the short space of two weeks you can make a noticeable improvement in the thighline through specific exercise. Always plan to include a few thigh exercises in your daily dozen.

Chicago.—The revival of long hair styles is turning into a headache for American women, Paul A. Thomas, scalp specialist, told a conference of trichologists here.

The style change, he said, is sending tens of thousands of women to doctors' with complaints of headaches and to scalp specialists to find out what is causing their scalps to itch and burn.

"The explanation," Thomas said, is that a sudden change to long, done-up hair after years of bobbing, not only loads the scalp with unaccustomed weight, but puts a strain on the delicate hair-growing structure.

"When bobbed the hair grows downward from the scalp; when long and done up, the accustomed 'downsweep' is changed so the hair pulls upward, placing a new strain on the tiny muscles surrounding the follicles and disturbing the tiny scalp nerves and blood vessels. Burning, itching scalp and the headaches result."

Gardening Made Easy

AN ENCHANTING country retreat—you'd think! Actually it's a corner of an everyday back yard—magically transformed by a woodsy rock garden and a tiny, jewel-like pool.

You can easily create such a spot in your own garden and this is the time to start.

Perhaps you already have a rocky slope. Fine! But if you haven't build one from the dirt you'll dig for the lily pool. Pu, down several layers of rock and soil—set the rocks at an angle as the diagram shows—and your slope will hold as firmly as you'd wish.

And now the "landscaping" and the real fun. You've a glorious array of plants and flowers to choose from—golden moss, creeping phlox and pinks are a mere start for sunny gardens; white moss, ferns and violets give you an idea what you can do in shadier ones.

But whatever you plant, follow a plan. Keep the taller plants—rhododendron or dwarf evergreens—as background. Lay out your flowers so they'll blossom in gay little clumps or will appear starlike among the stones.

For your pool, of course, there is only one thing—water lilies. Set a container in the ground, add soil and water and you've finished your preparations. From one pigmy lily you can get a hunred blooms a season—and what a delight to know that dry weather can't ruin them!

More pointers on rock gardens and lily pools are given in our 40-page booklet, Gardening Made Easy. Tells also how to plan and plant a complete garden—borders, roses, flowers for cutting, lawns.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Gardening Made Easy, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

American Males Get Another Break In Summer Suits

New York (AP).—In summer business suits, this will be the second year of the American male's emancipation.

It was just about a year ago that the stronger sex en masse discovered lightweight suitings and gave up perspiring the year around in winter clothes. The coming season promises further popularization of comfortable clothes with a lot of improvements and innovations.

Summer suits generally are made of light worsted alone or in varying combinations with cotton, mohair, silk and rayon. Wide popularity last year and subsequent experimentation have resulted in improvements in fabric combination and construction so that this year's crop probably will hold their shape better, wear longer and resemble more closely orthodox business clothes.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Did the wistaria come out especially for the party?" someone asked Mrs. Sol Bloom yesterday afternoon as shoals of guests did their social circling in the wistaria covered patio of the Bloom house on Columbia road.

"Not at all," the hostess quipped, "the party came out for the wistaria." And so it did. What might have been an indoor event was a very pleasant outdoor one, despite the lowering sky that was barely visible through the green and purple "roof" of one of Washington's prettiest patios.

At the cocktail table, the tea table, and around the playing fountain that adds another picturesque note to the patio, guess gathered . . . and lingered . . . to enjoy the gay company, and dainty tidbits that went the rounds with tea and cocktails. Mrs. Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom—two hostesses as gracious as any you will find in Washington—were assisted in receiving by Representative Bloom, who seemed to be everywhere at once, while the party moved along at a lively clip and guests continued to arrive. Mrs. Bloom's white and brown striped frock was worn with a brown crepe redingote. Her daughter was attired in a blue print, set off with a navy blue bolero.

Now and then, when a group of guests disappeared from the patio, you were sure to find them in the handsomely furnished reception room, where Mrs. Bloom's new 20-piece set of figurines and flower holders was on display. Everyone who knows Mrs. Bloom knows she has worked out an original art process to decorate picture frames, jewel boxes and mirrors; but nobody on hand yesterday had ever seen such an exquisite example of her work as the set she had made for a dining table centerpiece.

Right out of the eighteenth century came designs for the billowing, lacy skirts and towering head-dresses of the ladylike figurines that are part of the set. Knee breeches, satin waistcoats and velvet robes of men in the day of Louis XVI also were re-created in color and contrast. Garlands of roses, perky feathers and ribbon streamers had been fashioned by Mrs. Bloom, who hand-painted each piece and inlaid it with imitation gems by the process she has patented. Most of her spare time the past four months has been devoted to the figurines and the ten shallow, bud-trimmed flower-holders that go with them.

But back to the patio, and the party. Among those assisting at the tea table was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who arrived from the luncheon given by Mrs. J. D. Le Cron. Mrs. Wallace wore a navy blue crepe court over a blue and white flowered frock and a natty blue sailor. Others who did duty at the tea table while I was there were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mme. Marc Peter and Mrs. William E. Borah.

Diplomatic, official and residential circles were well represented among the scores of guests. Mrs. Cordell Hull, in a stunning black and white ensemble, was there; also, Mrs. Claude Swanson, whose gayly flowered frock was worn with a small navy blue hat. Mrs. Higgins Chapin, whose small hat trimmed with pale blue wings was one of the smartest at the party, was among the earlier arrivals; as were Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland.

Mme. Van Haersma de With, in a navy and white ensemble, was there; also, Lady Marler, who arrived with Miss Willa Magee; Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, George T. Summerlin; Misses Mary and Josephine Patten, who came on to the party after attending the Swedish Tercentenary Art Exhibition at the Corcoran; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, the Swiss Minister, Marc Peter; Mrs. Harold Walker, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Also, Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Witold Wancowicz; Anthony de Balsy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation; Ralph Snowden Hill, Wolcott Waggaman, Mrs. Russell Bennett and many others.

Marie Sullivan Wed in Church

Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown yesterday morning at 10 o'clock was the scene of the wedding of Miss Marie Sullivan and Charles Edward Bodson. The Rev. Henry J. Wiesel, S. J., president of Georgetown Preparatory School, officiated. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan and the late John D. Sullivan. Mr. Bodson is the son of John J. Bodson, of Bayonne, N. J., and the late Mrs. Bodson.

Given in marriage by Dr. Richard P. Sullivan, the bride was gowned in white satin made on princess lines. Her veil fell from a Juliet cap of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Katherine T. Sullivan, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. She wore pink chiffon and carried Johanna Hill roses and blue larkspur. The bridesmaids were Miss Frances Middleton and Miss Madeline Morgan, both attired in aquamarine chiffon and carrying old-fashioned bouquets.

David A. Fielws, of Sharon, Pa., was the best man, and the ushers were Vincent L. Bodson, of Bayonne, brother of the bridegroom, and Frederick Sullivan, brother of the bride.

Following the reception at the home of the bride's mother, the couple left for Quebec. They will make their home in Washington. Mr. Bodson, who is an attorney in the criminal division of the Department of Justice, is a graduate of Georgetown University and the Washington College of Law.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Laura E. Thornburgh, grandmothers of the bride; Miss Laura Thornburgh and Miss Margaret Thornburgh, all of Knoxville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bodson, Mrs. John Carter and Mrs. Thomas McArdle, of Bayonne.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

ALL WASHINGTON society and a battery of distinguished out-of-town lawyers, members of the American Bar Association now convening here, met yesterday at the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken. Started eight years ago by the hosts as a dinner for the association people, this affair has since developed into an annual party.

The MacCrackens claim to have held off the rain which threatened yesterday afternoon by sheer will power, which was fortunate, as there must have been 300 present.

ARTHUR T. VANDERBILT, president of the association, and with Mrs. Vanderbilt guest of honor at the party, has been retained by Norman Thomas to sue Mayor Hague of Jersey City for his "kidnaping." Mrs. Vanderbilt comes from Newark, is no relation to the New York and Newport Vanderbilts.

Yesterday was Mr. Vanderbilt's last afternoon as president of the association. Today he will be succeeded by one of the three candidates for the office: Our own Frank Hogan, who was Mellon's lawyer; N. W. McChesney, of Chicago, or Charles Beardsley, of San Francisco.

ALTHOUGH many of the guests yesterday seemed a little bit hazy as to exactly why and for whom the party was being given, a thoroughly good time was had by all, except perhaps, a MacCracken youngster who sat uncomfortably and watched her garden swings usurped by dignified Senators and Representatives.

Sandwiches were piled up by the hundreds and there was everything to drink from tomato juice to rum punch.

• • • •

SEEN: Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, in a yellow and black frock, yellow gloves and small sailor hat trimmed in yellow, sitting on a garden bench with Mrs. Wallach Merriam and others. Mrs. James F. Curtis made one of her infrequent appearances. Senator Warren Austin, Representative Maury Maverick, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Senator Vandenberg and Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church represented the "Hill." Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who goes to afternoon parties as seldom as does Mrs. Curtis, rushed in from a caucus meeting wearing a smart navy blue coat and hat to match.

• • • •

"ALL WASHINGTON" was further represented by Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol; Mrs. Harry Baxter, Mrs. George T. Pettingill, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, Carroll Morgan, Mrs. Andrew Saul, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, John Pratt, one of the younger lawyers here; Frau Herbert Scholz, all in navy blue; Keith Officer, Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark and Mrs. Granger Blair, who is planning to sail in July to visit Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy in London.

Margaret Holz To Become Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Henry Holz announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Phyllis, to Paul Ellwood Berkeley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Platt Berkeley, of this city.

Both Miss Holtz and Mr. Berkeley are graduates of Central High School. Mr. Berkeley also was graduated from Benjamin Franklin University. Miss Holz is a member of Chi Delta Sigma Sorority.

The wedding will take place June 21.

• • • •

Miss Margaret Parkhurst, daughter of Mrs. M. Argue Parkhurst, of New York, has completed plans for her wedding to Rawson Atwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Desler Atwood, of Brooklyn. The prospective bride was graduated from the National Cathedral School here.

The wedding will take place June 3 at the Garden City, Long Island Hotel and will be performed by the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving 2d, dean of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City.

Miss Parkhurst will have Mrs. George Desler Atwood, jr., of Rockville Center, as her matron of honor, and Miss Mary Louise Oak, of Tulsa, Okla., a cousin, will serve as maid of honor.

Justice Rosenberry, Of Wisconsin, Is Here

Chief Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry, of Wisconsin, will arrive here today from Madison to attend the meetings of the American Law Institute, and will have a suite at the Carlton.

Others here for the meetings are Richard R. Powell, of Columbia University Law School, and Mrs. Powell and Samuel Williston of Harvard Law School. They also are staying at the Carlton.

Returns to Capital.

Mrs. James Roosevelt has returned to her residence in Georgetown after a visit with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Cushing, of New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Guy Withers To Give Musicale

In honor of her sister, Miss Lois Beale Harrold, of Waynesville, N. C., who is visiting her for two weeks, Mrs. Guy Withers will entertain at a musicale and luncheon today at her residence.

Guests will include Miss Mary Butcher, of Richmond; Mrs. Joseph P. Crocket, of Alexandria; Mrs. F. I. Entwistle, who with Lieut. Entwistle will leave Washington next week, as he has been assigned to the new cruiser, Honolulu; Mrs. F. M. Featherston, Mrs. Walter Percival Gray, Mrs. Thomas A. Groover, Mrs. Joseph J. Haydn, Mrs. Huron W. Lawson, Mrs. David Lynn, Mrs. Mitchell Marques, who will go shortly to Kentucky to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Seifried, Mrs. Roy M. Palmer, Mrs. Henriette Bagger Plum, Mrs. St. Clair Thomas, who will sail for Europe early in June for a stay of three months with her family, and Mrs. Dean Turley.

S. S. Jaffes to Give Tea On Sunday Afternoon

Dr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Jaffe have issued invitations to a tea on Sunday afternoon at 407 Dorset avenue, their home in Somerset, Md.

Guest of honor at the affair will be Mrs. Victor N. Jaffe, daughter-in-law of the hosts, whose marriage to Mr. Jaffe took place last winter.

Give Dinner.

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertained at a dinner last evening at the legation on Massachusetts avenue. There were 22 present. Associate Justice James C. McReynolds was the ranking guest.

Announce Birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Talbot McElvenny announce the birth of a daughter, Elizabeth Steiwer, on May 5, at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. McElvenny is the former Miss Elizabeth Steiwer.

Argentine, Swedish, Czech Envoys Are Present, Among Others.

The French Embassy, which seems to be the chief gathering place of all of the brighter lights of Washington society these days, served again last evening as the setting for another one of the dinner parties given by the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin.

Those present included the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Swedish Ambassador and Mme. Wollmar Bostrom; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Vladimir Hurban; the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins; Senator and Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, and Representative Caroline O'Day.

Also Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness Herve de Gruben; Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, and members of the French Embassy staff.

32,000 Enrolled In Junior League As Meeting Nears

According to Junior League statistics, there are at least 32,000 members of society in the United States instead of a paltry "400." These figures are being given out before the Association of Junior Leagues, meeting in Pittsburgh from May 16 to May 20. The larger total represents young ladies belonging to the organization.

Mrs. William North Sturdevant, president of the local group, will attend the conferences, as will Miss Cecil Lester Jones, who will succeed her in June.

While there will be plenty of parties during the sessions, the event will have its more serious side, with discussions as to ways and means of carrying on the charitable work which is one of the first duties of the Junior League.

H. L. Williamson Wed in Bermuda

Of interest in State Department circles is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Ware Cady, of Hewlett, Long Island, of the marriage of the latter's sister, Mrs. John Bradley Cumings, of Bradlea Farm," Bedford Hills, N. Y., to Harold L. Williamson, of the Foreign Service.

The ceremony took place at St. John's Church, Pembroke, Bermuda, May 7, the Rev. Eustace Strong officiating. Only Mr. and Mrs. Cady witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Williamson is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Hurd, of New York, and is the widow of John Bradley Cumings. Mr. Williamson's first wife, Margaret Virginia Withmar, died several years ago. He is a graduate of Yale University, class of 1913, and of the Harvard Graduate School, and has a son, Harold L. Williamson, jr., who attends St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H. Mrs. Williamson's children are John Bradley Cumings, jr., Lea Cumings and Joan Thayer Cumings.

Mr. and rs. Williamson and the children will spend the summer at Pembroke, Bermuda, where Mr. Williams is United States Consul.

Florence Gibson Entertains Adens

The Adens have lived in the Argentine for more than 20 years and Dr. Aden has done much to build up the college with which he is connected. He and Mrs. Aden have an extensive circle of friends in Washington, many of whom called to see them Monday afternoon at Miss Gibson's home.

Mrs. Harriman, Envoy, Tells News Women About Norway

MRS. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN.

Her Hearers Conclude It Must Be Delightful Place to Be Minister.

A record-breaking crowd of newspaper women and their guests heard Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, give an "off-the-record" talk and answer a barrage of questions at the weekly luncheon meeting yesterday of the Women's National Press Club. Her speech was the first she has made before a large meeting since her return to Washington.

Introduced by the president, Miss Doris Fleeson, Mrs. Harriman—who prefers being called that, rather than "Mme Minister" while she is on vacation—wore a tailored frock of dark blue wool, trimmed with a white collar and cuffs. Her dark blue hat was rimmed with curled pencil blue feathers and circled with a dusty pink band. What she had to say about Norway had everyone in the audience wanting to go there. At the close of the luncheon, many flocked around her to find out more about the country she had found so interesting and delightful.

Among the guests were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, accompanied by her house guests, Mrs. Sidney French, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Mrs. Brinton Hall, of Belding, Mich.; Mrs. Richard M. Kleberg, wife of Representative Kleberg, of Texas; Mrs. Charles O. Broy, wife of the American Consul at Brussels, who is the house guest of her sister, Mrs. G. N. Kimmel; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. James Lee Ackerson, Mrs. Lewis B. McBride, Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, Mrs. C. M. Drake, Mrs. Alfred L. Ridings, of Sherman, Tex.; Mrs. Randolph Keith Forrest and Miss Betty Barnes, who is the house guest of her aunt, Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly.

Mrs. Harriman, who has been widely feted since her recent arrival here, and will continue to be until she leaves for Norway next month, was guest of honor last evening at a dinner given by Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis in their home on New Hampshire avenue. Other parties planned for her this week include a dinner to be given by Mrs. Bowler Hull Friday evening.

Celebrates Birthday.

Irimescus Give N. Y. Reception

The Minister and Mme. Irimescu are expected to return to Washington the end of the wek and will celebrate the holiday again with a party June 8.

The former Financial Counselor of the Legation and Mme. George Boncesco, who were to have sailed tomorrow for Europe on the Champlain, have had to postpone their departure owing to the recent strike among workers of the French Line. They are hoping to get away on the Manhattan, sailing May 18, but have not yet made reservations.

M. and Mme. Boncesco left Washington last week for New York after being stationed here for almost 12 years. M. Boncesco has been transferred to the foreign office in Bucharest.

Dr. Fraga, Cuban Envoy, Speaks At Luncheon Meeting Today

Senator Key Pittman Also to Talk on 'Our Foreign Relations' Before Audience of Many Diplomatic Officials.

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, will address a luncheon meeting of the Section of International and Comparative Law today at the Mayflower. His subject will be "A Comparative Study of the Constitution of the United States and of Constitutions of Pan American Countries." Dr. Fraga formerly served with the World Court at The Hague.

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will also speak to the guests on "Our Foreign Relations."

Among those expected to attend the luncheon are Mehmet Munir Ertegun, Ambassador of Turkey; Hans Dieckhoff, German envoy; Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Ambassador of Mexico; Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador; Colon Eloy Alfaro, envoy from Ecuador; the Bolivian Minister, Luis Fernando Guachilla; Dmitri Naoumoff, Bulgarian Minister; the Colombian Minister, Miguel Lopez Pumarejo; the Latvian Minister, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Swedish Minister, Wollmar Bostrom; the Minister of the Union of South Africa, Ralph William Close; Leon DeBayle, Minister of Nicaragua; Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation, and Hussein Mahmoud Rady, Charge d'Affaires of the Egyptian Legation.

Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, chairman of the guest committee for the luncheon, will be assisted in receiving by Dr. Charles Pergler, William S. Culbertson, Heber Rice and John T. Vance.

Mrs. McGoodwin to Fete Sra. de Lozano Monday

Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, whose husband was formerly United States Minister to Venezuela, has cards out for a tea next Monday in honor of Senora de Lozano, wife of the Minister of Honduras.

The party will take place at the Hay-Adams House from 4:30 to 6:30.

D. C. Delegates Seek 1940 P.-T. A. Convention

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The 1940 convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held in Washington if the invitation being taken to Salt Lake City by Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District of Columbia Congress, is accepted. Mrs. Fry, now on her way to the biennial convention which opens Monday, is carrying the official invitation from the local associations to the national organization.

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, national president, and editor of the magazine of the Congress, went to Salt Lake directly from Michigan where she attended the State convention.

Among others from headquarters here who are attending is Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, second vice president, who will preside at the vesper services and tree planting Sunday preceding opening of the convention. He will also preside at the program-building clinics to be held Wednesday and Thursday.

Miss Charl O. Williams, national chairman of school education, will participate in the consultation on "Patterns for Learning," to be conducted each afternoon. Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, national chairman of legislation, will preside at the consultations on "Patterns for Citizenship," and Miss Florence Falgatter, chairman of home making, will participate in that on "Learning." Miss Ellen Lombard, home education chairman, will have a part in consultations on "Patterns for Personality Development."

Others from headquarters who are on their way to the convention are members of the staff who will act as recorders for the congress. They include Dr. William H. Bristow, general secretary; Miss Clarice Wade, publicity secretary; Miss Isa Compton, publication secretary; Miss Ruth Bottomley, summer round-up secretary, and Miss Frances Hays, education secretary.

An unusual number of Washingtonians are scheduled as speakers, discussion leaders, presiding officers, and as participants in various phases of the program. With the exception of the hostess city, no other city will have so many taking an active part in the convention.

Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will speak at the general session, Monday evening, on "Society's Responsibility for the Well-Being and Security of Children and Youth." Dr. Cliffford E. Waller, U. S. Public Health Service, will address the consultation section on "Patterns for Health," Monday afternoon on "Standards of Health for Today's Children."

Dr. William G. Carr, research director of the National Education Association, will speak at the education consultation Monday, on "The Education of the Child in a Day of Social Change." He will also take part in a panel discussion Tuesday on "The Place of Learning in the Growth and Development of the Child."

P. E. O. Sisterhood Has Annual Convention

Virginia Addison, Clubwoman, Announces Her Engagement

By Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley.

Miss Virginia Pearl Addison, youthful president of the Woman's Club of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County, anounced her engagement to Norman Hansen Ball just after the Whitehurst Special to the General Federation of Woman's Clubs triennial convention left Silver Spring Tuesday for Kansas City. Miss Addison, who had received her engagement ring on her way to the train, said the wedding would take place on June 1. She is a cousin of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, retiring president of the General Federation, and frequently has been her guest at Federation headquarters on N street.

With Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, the District of Columbia president, was Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, who went on to Jefferson City, where she will be the guest on Wednesday of Gov. Lloyd Stark and Mrs. Stark. Mrs. Charles A. Langley, of Takoma Park Woman's Club, was also in the party. Mrs. Langley, who is also treasurer of the Takoma Park Chapter of the Eastern Star, has attended General Federation conventions at Atlantic Citiy, Denver, Richmond and Miami.

Mrs. Grace Ryan representing the Woman's Community Club of Kensington, will go on to New Mexico, Arizona and to Hollywood, where she will visit her brother, Ben A. Davis, who is appearing in several of the recent movies. Mrs. Ryan will visit in Pasadena, Salt Lake City, Chicago and Detroit before returning home.

Arriving in Kansas City this afternoon, we were met by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, our Maryland candidate for first vice president, with special car and a police escort, and conducted to our hotel headquarters. Mrs. Whitehurst had attended the meeting of the department chairmen yesterday, when final plans were made for the program she will present Thursday afternoon.

There is talk on the forth coming election to be heard everywhere, and, of course, interest of our delegates centers in Mrs. Whitehurst.

Sectional considerations enter into these lobby talks and State lines sway the conversation. Each year the division of loyalty is widening between the old order that votes for the dear, sweet woman who has worked so faithfully and so deserves the office, and the new element that votes for the efficient, up to date, alert condidate who is the best one for the office.

200 Attending P. E. O.'s Session

Nearly 200 members of the P. E. O. of the District of Columbia are attending the annual convention of the sisterhood in session today at the Shoreham Hotel. The convention opened yesterday with business sessions morning and afternoon and a banquet last night at which Mrs. Bessie Raney, of Chicago, supreme chapter representative, was the principal speaker.

The sessions of the organization are closed, but last night's banquet was an open meeting at which the husbands of members, known as the "B. I. L.'s," or brothers-in-law of the organization, were guests. Dr. George B. Wood, of American University, offered the invocation, and a short talk was made by Dr. Ella R. Fales, District of Columbia president, as well as by Mrs. Raney. The principal part of the program was devoted to music by the Glee Club of the telephone company of Washington, under the direction of Robert Davidson and assisted by Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto, a member of Chapter B, and Mrs. Carolina Randell, violinist. The toastmistress was Mrs. Frances Hollingsworth.

Mrs. Mabelle Sterns, Mrs. Effie Williams and Mrs. Lou P. Woodruff were presented as veteran members of the sisterhood, having belonged more than 50 years. All are affiliated with Chapter B.

Mrs. Sterns, wearing a gray taffeta dress which had been made for her aunt in 1866, recalled the days in which she first became a member of the P. E. O.

Others on the program were Mrs. Raney, Miss Laura Van Duyn Hanson, Mrs. Katherine Jacob and Mrs. Helene M. Potts, who discussed various phases of the organization's activity; Mrs. Beth M. Ferguson, second vice president, who opened a discusion of its educational projects; Miss Julia McMillan, who gave impressions of Cottey College; Mrs. Nellie Higbie and Mrs. Flora Hoover, Mrs. Anna K. Underwood and Miss Hazel Nielson. Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig sang at the morning session.

Gettysburg College Women's League Elects Officers

The Washington Women's League of Gettysburg College yesterday elected new officers headed by Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard as president, to succed Mrs. Rufus M. Weaver. The election took place at the annual meeting, held at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, With Mrs. Chester S. Simonton, of Harrisburg, general president of the league, as guest speaker.

Mrs. Simonton discussed the ideals and objectives of the organization whose purpose is to create a spiritual background for the students of Gettysburg College. Its membership is composed of women of the Lutheran Church who help the college in every way possible. The general league has 17 sub-leagues in Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia. They have built a Y. M. C. A. on the college campus and maintain a secretary there, and lately have financed the turning of the old boys' academy into a building for girls, Mrs. Simonton told the members. She also announced that the annual league convention would be held the first Thursday and Friday of November in Harrisburg.

The Washington league has a membership of more than 100. New officers, in addition to Mrs. Rinard, are: Mrs. Paul Dunbar, first vice president; Mrs. Herman Blau, second vice president; Mrs. John F. Krechting, third vice president; Mrs. J. Harold Munter, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles H. Butler, treasurer; Mrs. Amos E. Taylor, corresponding secretary.

Alexandria Group Opens New Season

The Alexandria Business and Professional Women's Club last night held its first meeting of the new season at the George Mason Hotel. Newly elected officers were headed by the president, Miss Corrine Reardon, who appointed her committee chairmen for the year.

Serving with her are Elizabeth Apperson, vice president; Irene Pancoast, recording secretary; Edith Whitten, corresponding secretary, and Alice Gronau, treasurer. Chairmen of committees are: Edna Kennedy, education; Lelia Thompson, emblem; Catherine Johnson, finance; Virginia Lammond, health; Elizabeth Schneider, international relations; Mary Monroe, membership; Dolly Callahan, legislation; Alice Whitton, program co-ordination; Elizabeth Apperson, publicity; Winnie Cox, public affairs; Evangeline Barrett, publications; Leole Zimmerman, research; Kroos Ficklin, resolutions, and Elizabeth McGahey, transportation.

The meeting was a birthday celebration with a large cake made by Mrs. Dollie Shepperson as a feature of the dinner. The club's 17 years were reviewed by Miss Mary Monroe, a charter member, and the program included a group of vocal selections by Mrs. W. Cameron Roberts, accompanied by Mrs. Elva Book, and piano numbers by Mrs. Harold Martin.

THE WOMEN'S SAFETY COMMITTEE of the District of Columbia Motor Club, of which Mrs. George C. Thorpe is chairman, will have its final luncheon meeting next Wednesday at the Sulgrave Club.

The program will include a talk on "A Conspicuous Contribution to Children's Safety," by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the Girl Scouts of America; on "Washington Gardens as a Safety Factor," by Miss Edith Coulson, of the Council of Social Agencies; "Future Plans for Our National Capital," by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; "Existing Drunken Driver Tests," by Dr. George C. Ruhland, and "Tentative Plans for a School for Drivers," by Richard M. Ham, director of safety for the motor club.

THE PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION of the Chevy Chase elementary school will present Lisa Gardiner, assisted by members of the Washington National Ballet, next Friday evening, May 13, at Leland Junior High School.

The Chevy Chase elementary school is particularly interested in making this a success as one of the featured soloists, Miss Mary Day, is their dancing teacher.

Arrangements are being made by Mrs. Herbert Flynn.

THE D. C. CONGRESS OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS did not have its May meeting yesterday—all because of a change in its by-laws designating the fourth instead of the second Tuesday of the month for its regular business session.

• • • •

Teachers, pupils and parents of McKinley High School attended an open house there last night. Supper was served at the cafeteria from 5 to 7; shops and laboratories were open from 6 to 9; a demonstration was given in the girls' gymnasium from 8:20 to 9 and a musical program in the auditorium from 9 to 10. The Parent-Teacher Association co-operated with the school in planning the event.

Weather Frowns, Then Relents Toward Erwins' Garden Party

Hostess Dons Light Coat to Receive Guests, and Later Sun Comes Out; All Agree It Was a Perfect Afternoon.

By Elizabeth Ford.

For a while it looked as if that unknown quantity, Washington weather, might cause the garden party given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin to be an indoor party instead. However, Mrs. Erwin braved the elements, put on a lightweight coat over her flowered pink chiffon dress and received her guests, the members of the Italy-America Society, out of doors.

Later the sun came out, slanting across the green lawn and glinting over the polished leaves of the stately box hedges, which spread in well-ordered lines south of the white columns of the Georgian porch.

The tables set out in a little glade under the trees, the guests wandering through the gardens, chatting and having a cup of tea or coffee and little cakes, made just the sort of picture that fits in best with a spring afternoon.

Mrs. Delos Blodgett, Mrs. Erwin's mother, presided at the tea urn and wore a big white garden hat, with blue ribbons and a flowered dress which repeated tones of the same blue in its designs. Miss Katherine Porchee, of Florida, and Miss Mona Dugas, of Louisiana; Mrs. Erwin's cousins were among the company as were Miss Dorothy Tirrell and Miss Madeline Austin, who busily acted as guides for informal tours through the gardens where the iris, in due season, is taking the center of the stage.

Not in the receiving line but informally greeting the guests as they gathered about the buffet were Mr. Erwin and Dr. William McClellan, president of the society.

The Italian Ambassador, Fulvio de Suvich, was out of the city, but the Italian Embassy was well represented by the Counselor for Emigration's wife, Signora Eugenio Bonardelli, who was accompanied by her mother, Signora Desjardins, of Montreal. Also present, and wearing a print dress of delicate black designs on white, was Signora Valeria Casmelli, wife of the Counselor, and Vittorio Bifulco, Assistant Counselor for Emigration.

Glimpsed here and there during what everyone agreed was a perfect afternoon were Dr. and Mrs. William Davenport, Mrs. A. G. Wilder, Baroness von Below, whose big black hat was trimmed with accents of white, and who wore a necklace of antique gold; Walter Davidge, the past president of the Italy-America Society; Mrs. Wilton Lambert, attired in a black dress, a short black cape and a dashing close-fitting black hat; Mrs. Morgan Schuster, very stately in a black dress over which she wore a fox scarf, Mrs. Perry Heath, in dark blue; Mrs. Robert L. Taylor, in a gay and colorful print dress, and Miss Maude Davidge in a gray outfit.

Also strolling about the grounds were Mrs. James G. Wenz, in brown; Miss Ethel Syford, in gray and black and a broad-brimmed black hat; Miss Janet Richards and Miss Netah Evans, the secretary of the society, who wore an attractive light-green dress and who was here, there and everywhere seeing that the guests felt at home.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The "bugaboo of high blood pressure" constantly frightens a great many people who have found out, more or less by accident, that their blood pressure is a little higher than the standard tables would indicate. They may have found this as a result of a life insurance examination or application for an industrial position.

The question of what is normal blood pressure is one of the most difficult things to determine for any one individual, as has recently been pointed out by one of the prominent physicians at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

If you take the blood pressure and simply refer to the standard tables and let the decision rest there, it is a simple matter, but there are complications. In the first place, the insurance company tables were compiled after examination of a large number of absolutely normal people; the exceptional cases were rejected and they were compiled in order to protect the insurance company, with a wide margin. Even so there is quite a little variation in what would be the standard limits. The following are the limits:

Under the age of 29....105-135
The ages of 30-40.....110-140
The ages of 40-55.....115-150
The age of 55 or over...120-153

Now if one goes out into the general population, not seeking insurance risks, he finds that taking a large number of people who, except for their blood pressure are entirely healthy, the probable normal limits are as wide as this:

Ages 55-59, men.....100-159
Women 104-196
Over 65, men.....86-186
Women 112-222

There are many things that influence blood pressure. One is exercise. A normal man who took trips of a set of three steps, and took 30 trips in one and one-half minutes, raised his blood pressure from 110 to 160.

Posture also influences. It is higher when the patient is flat—in one case 140 as compared to 180.

Excitement. The first examination nearly always finds a high blood pressure so that repeated determinations have to be made.

Temperature. Cold raises and heat lowers blood pressure.

The conclusion is that the decision as to whether a patient's blood pressure is normal can only be made after many examinations.

It is true that out of 100 persons with high blood pressure 25 die prematurely, but no man can tell which they are and every physician of experience has known cases who live a full life span after discovering a rise of 25 to 50 points in blood pressure.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 10.

DO YOU REMEMBER the old days when the Rockefeller tribe were called "oil barons"—and things much worse—until they went intensively philanthropic? Today "Rockefeller Center" in the heart of Manhattan they are immersed in business undreamed of by the late J. D.

ALICE HUGHES

Variety, the weekly of show business, now figures that their money stake in entertainment runs to $7,000,000, most of which is involved in the Radio City Music Hall, world's largest and most thrilling theater. They are also in the saloon and restaurant business with the Rainbow Room and Grill—65 flights up. Their gardens, their skating rink and outdoor cafes—on which you could drop a brick from the spires of St. Patrick's Cathedral at Fiftieth street and the Avenue, are famous all over the world. The only tragedy in the whole set-up is the Center Theater, a block from its big sister, the Music Hall. It is now agreed that the Center, considered by thousands of us as the most beautiful playhouse ever built in this world, should never have been put up at all. It's a biggie, seating 3,600, but has an amazing sense of intimacy, due to its design. But this lovely and charming place has been a sad dud, having tried everything.

Right now, however, the Center is open and busy, for the San Carlo pop-priced opera troupe is in the midst of a short season, its first here since '34. Most interesting figure is pretty Mary McCormic, the soprano who for years cracked the newspapers the wrong way, what with four marriages and other harmless peccadilloes. But it's a new Mary now. "I've tried everything else, and now I might as well try reform," she says. No more weddings, no more grief, says Mary, as she sings Marguerite in "Faust" for the town opera-hoppers. She can sing, and she knows opera, but the world loses a lot of color with Mary McCormic leading the good life. Shucks, anyone can sing "Faust!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I'm worried about Martin, nearing his sixth birthday. Designing women, the sirens, have already got their hooks into him! Dragging him into the family drug store the other day, the chemist greeted him by name, as an old pal. "How come?" I asked. "Oh, he comes in here all the time with those little blonde Winslow girls, who got their pictures in the papers at Easter," said Doc. "What about it, and where do you get the money?" I asked the new sucker-for-women. The kid positively leered. "Oh, I always have a few pennies—and, anyway, it's the girls' idea." See, vamps of 3 and 5! Still, it is not quite time to tell him about the little birds, is it? . . . We poor mothers!

The Bingo Terror exploded with a roar the other day. Coppers raided a huge bingo orgy, husbands having beefed that the little women were losing the grocery money. Over 3,000 persons ran out of the place and Mrs. Moe Barron, owner of the hall, was mobbed by gambling ladies demanding their quarters back! Five men were thrown into the sneezer and the husbands are chuckling and pointing the finger of scorn. It's their turn!

I hear that Joan Crawford wants to do a stage show here in the fall. Whoa thar, Joanie-woanie! Remember the sad fate of so many Hollywood people on Broadway this year! And I believe your stage experience was limited to kicking up in a Winter Garden chorus in the old days when you were Lucille Le Seur, from K. C.!

Never make old-fashioned fun of John Chinaman and his laundry! The local "no tikee, no washee" crowd have sent five ambulances, costing $10,000, to the homeland!

Still the clever girl clothes-creators come to the big town, blazing with ambition and hope! The latest recruit is Phil McDonald, from Maine, who says she follows no trends, but makes individual clothes for individual women, always stressing femininity. She has just shown a line of 31 new and handsome little numbers — with plentiful prints for day and net and chiffon for evening. The girls come on, and on and on, to storm this town. Good luck to them all!

Mrs. Z. L. Dalby Made Regent of D. A. R. Chapter

Mrs. Z. Lewis Dalby last night was elected regent of President Monroe Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at a meeting followed by a musicale at her home. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, president general of the D. A. R., was guest of honor at the affair.

Other new officers are Miss Louise Bercau, vice regent; Miss Alethea Hurley, chaplain; Miss Laura Elizabeth Calmes, recording secretary; Miss Mary Rose Yarnall, corresponding secretary, Miss Nellie Rolston, treasurer; Mrs. Harold Hargett, registrar, and Miss Laura Ruff, historian.

The musicale at which members of the chapter and their guests were entertained, was presented by the daughter of the hostess, Helen Churchill Dalby, coloratura soprano. Miss Dalby, who has been devoting herself to concert and church singing in New York for the past year, is here for a visit with her parents before going to Hollywood.

Miss Dalby sang a group of old English songs, including "The Lass With a Delicate Air" and "When Love Is Kind." Among her other numbers were an aria from "The Magic Flute" by Mozart, Musetta's song from "La Boheme" and "Ich Liebe dich," by Grieg.

Home Residents Will Greet Tour

Participants in the tour of historic houses in Alexandria on Saturday will be greeted with true Virginia hospitality. At each home, guests will be met by the occupant, as well as by other prominent Alexandria residents who have graciously consented to assist in receiving and conducting guests through the houses.

Mrs. Henry S. Wattles, in connection with the Rector's Aid Society of St. Paul's Church, and Mrs. William Boothe, in connection with the Parish Aid Society of Christ Church, have arranged to assist hostesses. Care has been taken to acquaint these women with the most interesting and important data regarding the homes where they will be on duty. Tickets may be obtained at the first house visited.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

"Let's strike a blow for freedom!" says Vice President Garner occasionally.

To his intimates that means only one thing—what the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina.

Bliss . . $25,000 garden?

Washington gossip hath it that the British cabinet is about evenly divided whether the Duke of Windsor and Wally should be allowed to have a baby; just a shade against it . . .

Only an act of God can overrule the British cabinet.

Recently Tommy (Side Door) Corcoran wrote a gentle, diffident letter objecting to the findings of a poll by some researchers on pump-priming and taxes . . . He did not write it on Government letter-head paper; he used a plain sheet, with "Room 1017-A, 1825 H street" typewritten on it.

That's the address of the RFC, where White House Tommy is a special counsel. He was just protesting as a private citizen.

5 O'CLOCK VOICES: At the Willard: "He hits in the clinches; he kisses business and kicks it in the pants simultaneously." At the Carlton: "Now Roosevelt knows what it is to have trouble with his hired hands" . . . At the Lafayette: "Four years from now Wall Street may be begging for him to come back."

I haven't been able to concentrate on my shaving as I should since an army wife who used to live in this house of ours dropped in and told us that a slab of marble in the bathroom floor was part of the floor of the old B. & O. depot here, where President Garfield fell when he was shot,

It seems that the late Senator Dale, of Vermont, who built this house, had a taste for curios, and bought the slab and had it put into the floor . . . I hope he enjoyed shaving on it.

The President's messages do not strike Congress with so much of a shock as it would seem . . . He read aloud, for example, his message on the $5,000,000,000 lending-spending (recovery) bill—the one being debated on the Hill today—to a group of Congressional leaders the night before he sent it over.

Three miraculously youthful Senators are McAdoo (Calif.), 75 years old; Murray (Mont.), 62, and Hitchcock (S. Dak.), 71 . . . Each is well over 6 feet tall, slim as a basketball center and lithe and graceful as an adagio dancer . . . McAdoo always runs upstairs . . . All three live west of the Mississippi, but maybe that isn't the secret . . . Each of 'em should make a speech before Congress adjourns, telling how they did it. Most men, I reckon, would read every word.

They've been a-feudin' over in Henderson Castle, the red, turreted palace on Meridian Hill, which was once the show place of Washington . . . The owner tried to convert it from small apartments into a boarding house, and the apartment dwellers wouldn't convert; just sat tight; they preferred home cooking in kitchenettes . . . (Wealthy Senator Henderson, of Missouri, and later his widow used to entertain royalty there.) I must tip-toe in and learn how it came out.

After his first Washington cocktail party, a lawmaker from the hill country, who suffered a couple of bent ribs in the crush around the refreshment table, offered a suggestion: Why not hang the refreshments from the ceiling, as they hang hams in the back country, or chains of garlic in southern Europe. Then a snack would always be within reach . . . Well, why not?

My most pious scout reports, with some chagrin, that prayer has been offered in the Senate only twice this year . . . Prayer is offered not every day, but every legislative day, and there have been only two legislative days this year . . . The first one lasted from January 5 to April 20; the second one may last to the end of the session . . . That makes it easy on Chaplain ZeBarney Phillips, who gets paid $1,680 a year.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Since the baseball season began some members of Congress have been bringing their hats along from their offices to the cloakrooms in the Capitol, so they can make for the ballpark at a moment's notice . . . A humble gardener who got a glimpse of the Dumbarton Oaks gardens of Robert Woods Bliss, the former Ambassador, estimated that they must cost $25,000 a year to maintain; just the gardens . . . Some one patriotically suggested that the Blisses donate their gardens, equalled by few under the sun, to the Government. But the Blisses would like to cultivate their gardens a while.

Drive Is Begun For Democracy By B'nai B'rith

A campaign "to prevent the progress and destroy the effect of all subversive influences" threatening Jews, Christians and the Nation as a whole was indorsed last night by the Supreme Lodge of B'nai B'rith, at its triennial convention at the Willard.

The delegates expressed their belief that "communism, fascism and naziism are the mortal enemies of democracy."

The central body of the Jewish fraternal organization directed its executive committee "to continue all efforts to crystallize public opinion and further to enlist the aid of the liberty-loving people of the world, men of all creeds and whatever nativity in a definite program" to fight activities inimical to the peace and security of democratic nations.

The executive committee was empowered to "devise ways and means, aggressively, to carry out the purpose and intent of this resolution."

Alfred M. Cohen, retiring president of the organization, later explained that no specific plans were projected. He said that the question of boycott had not been brought up during the closed discussion preceding adoption of the resolution.

The closing paragraphs of a report submitted Monday by Sigmund Livingston, chairman of the Anti-defamation League, also were adopted as "the sense of the convention." Denouncing communism, fascism and nazism, the report held that "anti-Semitism has been the tool and the entering wedge in the destruction of the modern Europen republics. Anti-Semitism and democracy are incompatible."

Earlier Judge A. B. Frey, president of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital, and Judge Jacob Asher, of Worcester, Mass., addressed the convention. Siegfried Hirsch, a German exile to Palestine, who represented the Palestine district of B'nai B'rith, spoke on conditions in the Holy Land.

Planes Flying Too Low Irk Randle Group

Anacostia Citizens Also Assail Contamination of Eastern Branch.

Low flying airplanes, which residents claim sometimes barely miss the treetops and peril the roofs of houses, were the objects of a vigorous complaint last night by the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, meeting at 2407 Minnesota avenue southeast.

Members were urged, after adoption of a resolution condemning the low-skimming planes, to investigate the matter as individuals, and determined just where the aircraft that cause the disturbance come from.

District officials were criticized by the association for permitting contamination of the Anacostia River while new machinery is being installed at the Sewage Disposal Plant. In a resolution, the association held that the Commissioners should have had sufficient foresight to prevent emptying of sewage directly into the Eastern Branch. A request was made for the fire boat to spray the sea wall and banks and eliminate as much of the waste as possible.

Summit Park Citizens.

A resolution urging that all trees on Pennsylvania avenue southeast, between Second and Fifteenth streets, damaged or destroyed in any way, be replaced, was adopted last night by the Summit Park Citizens Association.

The group went on record as seeking the improvement of L'Enfant Square, and asking its elimination as a playground in view of the traffic hazard it offers to children.

W. G. Fallon was named delegate to the forthcoming meeting of the Washington Consumers Council. Two new members, Mr. and Mrs. L. Ford, were voted into the association.

Barry Farms Citizens.

Dreams Help Reach Goals, Canon Asserts

Vision, Galvanized Into Action, May Bring Peace, Says Jones.

Dreaming is not always impractical, for galvanized into action, it can be the means of reaching a real goal in life, the Rev. E. H. Jones, Canon of the Washington Cathedral, last night told an audience of over 200 young people at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, at the quarterly assembly of the Fellowship of the Diocese.

"World peace," he said, "may just be an idle dream today, but if enough people vision a warless world, a world made safe for democracy, and carry their thoughts into action, that ideal will eventually be reached."

One delegation of 22 young men and women traveled from St. Mary's City, Md. Another group came from the Collington, Glendale and Bowie churches. Twenty parishes were represented.

Father Parsons Cites Dentists' Duty to Society

Says Only Recognition of Obligation Can Avert Social Medicine.

Only by recognizing their duties toward society can physicians and dentists prevent the socialization of medicine as a profession, the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, dean of the Graduate School of Political Science at Georgetown University, told members of the District of Columbia Dental Society last night.

"Somewhere the individual must meet collectivism," said Father Parsons, "and it is by meeting collectivism as individuals that complete collectivism may be prevented."

Present trends toward socialism in the professions are merely reflections of the world trend away from individualism today, Father Parsons pointed out.

Between communism and fascism there is little difference, he said in his address at the Public Health auditorium. Both are the results of the failure of individuals to meet economic trends and political trends.

Chiefs Avoid Comment on Capital Mayor

Bill to Help Hospitals Collect in Emergency Cases Approved.

In a communication to the Budget Bureau, the Commissioners explained they were "advised that there will be an investigation made of the District by a firm employed by Congress for that purpose," and thus "believe it is wise to withhold comment" on a bill to provide municipal self-government for the District.

The bill, introduced last March by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, would abolish the present setup and create the office of mayor. The mayor would be elected by District residents.

Hospital Bill Approved.

Congress last week appointed the firm of E. O. Griffinhagen & Associates, of Chicago, to investigate the local government setup.

A bill which would protect hospitals on money due for services in cases "caused by negligence or fault of others" was approved by the Commissioners and sent to the Budget Bureau for consideration.

Agitation by several hospitals here which bear the burden of emergency cases prompted the proposed legislation.

A bill authorizing the Board of Dental Examiners to regulate activities of dental hygienists also was approved by the Commissioners. The bill also provides for tightening of law prescribing qualifications of applicants for licenses, the regulation of professional activities and conduct of licensed dentists.

Teacher Aid Refused.

The bill would set an annual registration fee of $3 for licensed dental hygienists.

The Commissioners reported unfavorably on a bill to give public school employes leave of absence with part pay for purposes of educational improvement. Some educational systems provide part pay for employes who, after fixed periods of service, desire to further their education.

The Commissioners found that the bill would require increased appropriations and "in view of the fact that Congress and the Commissioners now are engaged in devising new tax measures to produce additional revenue required to meet present fiscal needs of the District," an unfavorable report was given.

Poet-Dramatist Once Bus Boy Here Returns on Lecture Tour

His discovery by Vachel Lindsay as a bus-boy poet at the Wardman Park Hotel, and the writing of his first prize-winning poem, "The Weary Blues," while working here to obtain tuition fees for study at Howard University, proved of interest to a group of several hundred followers of his romantic career.

Poems of higher cultural value, "Negro Speaks of Rivers," "I, Too, Sing America" and "Song of Spain," the last written while there as an observer in the revolutionary period, he stated, served as the basis for his present American tour under auspices of various organizations, to bring poetry to the masses.

His readings included poems of youth, poems of the sea, poems about work, poems of Africa and poems with the international viewpoint. He was introduced by John P. Davis, secretary of the National Negro Congress.

Poison Oak Cramps Hitch-Hiking Style Of Boys, 10 and 11

Jerry Dunn and Ralph Lilly, 11 and 10 years old, thought to take advantage of two cases of poison oak that kept each from school yesterday by hitch-hiking to the home of Ralph's grandfather at Franklin, Va.

But their luck didn't hold, and they got no farther than Woodbridge, 22 miles away, and finally wound up in the Alexandria police station in temporary custody.

They thumbed a ride to Woodbridge and had stopped another car, but the driver turned around and drove to Alexandria. While a filling station proprietor was phoning police, Ralph and Jerry thumbed another ride. A fourth motorist overhauled them 8 miles from town and brought them back to the gas station where they were turned over to police.

'Numbers' Ban Test Goes to Jury Today

A District Court jury today will apply the first test to the new and drastic numbers law when it examines the case of Robert H. Williams, former employe of Walter Reed Hospital, on trial after police allegedly found 30 numbers slips in his possession several months ago.

Lieut. George M. Little and Sergt. George C. Deyoe testified they arrested Williams after an Army sergeant, Herman H. Yonce, told them Williams was taking numbers at the hospital from patients and was turning them over to runners every hour.

Asked who gave him the information, Sergt. Yonce refused to answer and was upheld by Justice Joseph W. Cox.

D. C. Ginkgo Trees' Ancestors Go Back for 159 Million Years

Washington should feel proud of its ginkgo trees, the Smithsonian Institution hinted yesterday, inasmuch as they are 150,000,000 years old and still going strong.

Of course, the Smithsonian pointed out, the individual specimens aren't that ancient, but they represent a family that already was in bloom when dinosaurs roamed the earth. And the marvel is that the breed has shown scarcely any major changes since the Jurassic geologic era.

Dr. Roland W. Brown, Geological Survey scientist working with the Smithsonian's fossil collections, found a ginkgo near the White House whose leaf shape was almost exactly the same as its Cretaceous period ancestor and widely different from that of its contemporaries.

Practically every other living thing with a family tree dating as far back as Jurassic, or even Cretaceous, days has become extinct or undergone such radical changes as to be unrecognizable, the Smithsonian said. Most other trees besides the ginkgo, for example, date only from the early part of the Eocene era, a mere 60,000,000 years ago.

Nats Stage 3-Run Rally in 8th, Beat Browns, 8 to 6

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

No small factor in the Nats' success this season has been the moderately-sized fellow who daily dons the catching paraphernalia and goes behind the plate. Richard Benjamin Ferrell, who was always rated among the better catchers in the American League, is beginning to prove it to Washington fans who last year had their doubts.

POVICH.

Little Ferrell, who came along to the Nats last summer with his big brother, Wes, in the Newsom-Chapman trade with Boston, never did capture the fancy of Washington fans in 1937. He was out of the line-up frequently with an injured throwing hand, and when he was in it was no great help to the Nats. On that part of the deal, Clark Griffith apparently took a licking.

But it seems that this is another season and Ferrel once again is the guy who used to be a fine little catcher. Because the hits are starting to rattle from his bat—lush, productive hits with men on bases—and at this writing Rick bows only to Zeke Bonura in the important matter of runs driven in on the Washington club.

Ferrell's recent slugging comes as a gratfying reminder to Washington fans that the Nats are strongly fortified in the catching department. Four times Ferrell has been a better than .300 slugger in his big league career and has hit as high as .315 and .312. In fact, his lifetime average in the big leagues over an eight-year period is .294.

When Rick batted only .244 last season, it was the poorest year he ever encountered in the big leagues. But he treated that philosophically, even if skeptical Washington fans didn't. He knew that his twice-broken hand was a terrific handicap. There were times, when he was playing regularly, that he was able to grip the bat with only one fist. No giant, he needs all his swinging power, and as a one-handed batter he could expect little results.

But this, as we were saying, is another year, and Rick is standing up there with a firm grip on his club. Pitchers who held him lightly last season are now wary of the fellow who always has been a line-drive hitter and never permitted the outfielders to play too close, else he'd pound that ball over their heads.

But Ferrell's greatest value to the Nats is probably the gilt-edge protection he is giving the club behind the plate. Bucky Harris, who worried along with Cliff Bolton for two years, appreciates Ferrell's presence and so do the Washington pitchers. There never was any complaint with Ferrell's throwing arm and he was always rated as a catcher who knew hitters.

At this writing, Ferrell is in possession of probably the toughest job of any catcher in the league. We mean that he is forced to catch the knuckle-ball pitching of Emil Leonard. No other backstop is asked to handle that kind of an assignment.

The knuckle ball, Leonard's particularly, is trying on a catcher, even an experienced catcher of Ferrell's type. It flutters and wabbles, and neither Leonard, who throws it, nor the catcher knows which way it is going to break, to say nothing of the batter. The knuckler can make a catcher look very awkward and inept, and Ferrell is forced to hop around incessantly trying to outguess the thing when Leonard is on the mound.

There have been no complaints, however, from Ferrell, who has incessantly called on Leonard to keep chucking his knuckler. While he was with Brooklyn, Leonard complained, the Brooklyn catchers refused to call for the knuckle ball. They didn't want the responsibility of catching it and their failure to signal for it cost Leonard his job with the Dodgers two years ago.

* * * *

To Ferrell, Leonard gives full credit for his victories with the Nats, declaring he has never pitched to a catcher who was so willing to take the rap. More than 50 per cent of his pitches have been knucklers, he was saying the other day, and although Ferrell has juggled a good percentage, he has never let one get away.

With men on bases, the knuckler is a particularly risky pitch for any juggling by Ferrell would be tantamount to a stolen base by the alert runner, but the Nats' catcher has shown no indication to take the easy way out. He calls for that knuckler as long as Leonard can throw it.

Birmingham, Ala., May 10.—The first round of elimination play in the twenty-seventh annual women's golf championship was run off today without a casualty, but a couple of the feminine stars had close calls.

The 18-year-old Miss Kirby, who won the title a year ago by defeating Mrs. Page 2 and 1, had to call on all her shots to edge out Miss Francis Owen, Florida State champion from Jacksonville, 2 and 1.

Medalist Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., also breezed into the second round, as did a host of other ranking competitors.

Marion Miley Wins, 6-5.

Mrs. Page, in advancing to the next round, knocked off a string of pars, birdies and a great eagle on the long fifth to overwhelm Mrs. E. C. Hollins, of New Orleans, 8 and 6. Miss Miley played 13 holes in just a stroke over par, eliminating Mrs. E. C. Beall, of Birmingham, 6 and 5.

Champion Kirby tomorrow faces young Joy McCann, of Montgomery, Ala., who had a 7-and-6 victory over Mrs. W. R. Stafford, of New Smyrna, Fla.

The next opponent of Mrs. Page will be Mrs. Samuel Israel, jr., of New Orleans, the Louisiana titleholder, 8-and-6 conqueror of Mrs. E. C. Neblett, of New Orleans.

Arrayed in the line-up that will go to the post for tomorrow's round of 16 were four former winners of the Southern championship, among them the veteran campaigner from Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. David C. Gaut, president of the Southern association and herself a four-time victor in this blue ribbon event of the Southland. Her opponent tomorrow will be Miss Miley, whose 75 qualifying score won medalist honors.

Mrs. Goldthwaite Wins.

Other former champions among the survivors were Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, who won the crown in 1933 as Aniela Gorczyca; Mrs. Mark McGarry, at St. Petersburg, Fla., the 1936 champion, and Miss Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, who triumphed in 1934.

Mrs. Goldthwaite's next opponent will be Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., who rallied to beat Mrs. Ben T. Parks, jr., of Charlotte, N. C., 2 and 1.

Mrs. McGarry came home victor by 4 and 3 over Mrs. S. J. Gillard, of New Orleans, and Miss Jameson, University of Texas student, triumphed 5 and 4 over Mrs. George Thompson, jr., of Fort Worth.

In the second round, Mrs. McGarry's opponent is Mrs. Peter Vredenburgh, of Montgomery, Ala., 6 and 5 conqueror of Mrs. John F. Degener, of Charlotte, N. C. Miss Jameson's opposition will come from Edna Saenger, of Shreveport, former Louisiana champion, who ousted Mrs. Carl Hess, of Birmingham, 7 and 5.

Miss Hemphill Wins.

One of the best rounds of shotmaking was turned in by Miss Kathryn Hemphill, who plaed ten holes in 1 under par to eliminate Mrs. Reid McKenzie, of Gainesville, Fla., 9 and 8. Miss Hemphill faces next Miss Dorothy Compton, Birmingham, who defeated Mrs. R. H. Trilck, of Birmingham, 2 up.

Mrs. Connally Henson, of Little Rock, the Arkansas title-holder, unloosed a string of pars and birdies to emerge victorious, 3 and 2, over Mrs. Bee Cockrell, of Gadsden, Ala. Her opponent tomorrow is Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex., medalist of the Southern's qualifying round in 1936 and 1937.

Cards Lose To Dodgers

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 10.—Led by husky Ernie Koy, who belted out two doubles and two singles, the Brooklyn Dodgers snapped out of their slump with a vengeance today. They let loose a 16-hit barrage that rocked three Cardinal pitchers to their foundations and routed the Cards, 10 to 2.

Left at the post when St. Louis opened with one run on doubles by Brown and Medwick in the first, Brooklyn tied the score in the second, got four runs each in the third and fifth, and tacked on one for good measure in the ninth.

Giants Trim Cubs, 5 to 1, For 4 in Row

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10—Supporting Harry Gumbert's fine right-handed flinging with a dozen hits, including four by Joe Moore, the New York Giants today trounced the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 1, to run their winning streak to four straight and their National League lead to four full games over the Cubs.

Gumbert set the Chicagoans down with five hits, all of them singles, and gave only three bases on balls. The Cubs scored their only run with two out in the fifth, on singles by Jurges and Hack and a pass to Charley Root.

Bill Lee started this final game of an abbreviated series for Chicago, but was in the showers before the first inning was over. Joe Moore greeted him with a single, walks to Bartell and Ott filled the bases, and Leiber brought home 2 runs with a crashing double. When two more walks, to Chiozza and Danning, forced in another run, Lee was yanked and Root took his place.

The veteran right-hander held the Giants scoreless until the sixth, when singles by McCarthy, Chiozza, Gumbert and Moore sent two more runs over the plate.

Double plays got Gumbert out of trouble in the first, when he walked two of the first three men to face him, and in the second, when Galan singled. Galan and O'Dea singled in succession to open the seventh, but Gumbert retired the next three men, including Pinch-hitters Lazzeri and Cavaretta, in order.

Bridgewater Beats Blues

The Bridgewater College trackmen defeated the Gallaudet College track team in a hotly-contested meet on the latter's field by the score of 65½-60½ today. By placing first and second in the last track event, the 220 low hurdles, the visitors from Virginia overcame an early lead of the Blues and then put the meet beyond the Gallaudet team's grasp by winning the discus throw.

Miller, the Eagles' star, accounted for 15 of his team's score by scoring firsts in both the hurdle races and the high jump. He was hard pressed for the honors of the day by Lowman, the Blues' sprint star, who totaled 11 points with firsts in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, and a third in the 220-yard low hurdles.

The summaries:

220-YARD DASH—Lowman (G), Philips (B), Woodis (B). Time, 23.5 seconds.

440-YARD RUN—Sease (B), Doering (G), Berke (G). Time, 53 seconds.

880-YARD RUN—Doering (G), Dixon (B), Diehl (B). Time, 2 minutes 10 seconds.

Reds Defeat Phils, 7 to 3; Cooke Stars

Cascarella Takes Hill in Sixth; Gives Up Only Two Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 10.—The Cincinnati Reds made hits count today and, led by the four-out-of-five performance of Dusty Cooke, routed Philadelphia, 7 to 3, before a chilled crowd of 1,133.

Big Jim Weaver, cast off from Pittsburgh, hurled four-hit ball through five innings, but walking his sixth and seventh man to open the sixth, was jerked for Joe Cascarella, who held the visitors to two hits and an unearned run the rest of the way.

Hugh Mulcahy allowed the Reds but five safeties, but again was cast in the role of losing pitcher after Linus Frey tripled to open the seventh inning and scored a moment later the first of three runs that put the game on ice. Al Smith relieved.

Herschel Martin, Philly centerfielder, was on his way to a perfect day at bat with two successive singles when knocked unconscious with a ball hurled by Bill Hershberger as he attempted to steal second in the third frame.

Physicians said tonight, however, that he did not appear to be seriously hurt.

Griffs Take 7th Straight And Series

Newsom Batted Out of Box; Game Is Won With 2 Retired.

By Shirley Povich.

At exactly 5:35 p. m. yesterday, the Nats won their seventh straight ball game.

That was the hour when Zeke Bonura, standing at the plate in the eighth inning with the bases full, rapped a crisp single into centerfield and moved the tying and winning runs home.

Until that happened, Washington's winning streak was a sick-looking item indeed and the Nats were fast skidding out of the league lead they had acquired the day before. There were two out and the Browns were out in front, 6-5, when big Zeke arrived on the scene.

The final score was 8 to 6 and the Nats' triumph moved them a full game ahead of the Yankees and Indians, who are bracketed in second place. Rain washed out every other game in the league yesterday.

Almada Paves the Way.

With Buck Newsom having departed the scene in the sixth inning after the Nats had cut the Browns' early margin to 6-5, Vito Tamulis, former Yankee southpaw, was entrusted with the protection of that one-run margin and he did a perfect job of it until two were out in the eighth.

Then Mel Almada, hitless all afternoon, whacked a single into rightfield and swiped second base with Lewis at bat. Lewis later drew a walk and so did George Case which brought Bonura up. After Tamulis pitched a ball to Bonura, Manager Gabby Street rushed out of the dugout with new instructions. Tamulis nodded understandingly but Bonura was unconcerned by this new strategy, cracking out his decisive hit on the next pitch.

That blow scored Almada and Lewis and sent Case to second and then the Browns presented the Nats with an entirely superfluous run a moment later. Second Baseman Hughes took Stone's grounder and threw it wildly to Tamulis who covered first base and Case skinned all the way home on the play.

But it should have been mentioned before this that Bonura had a co-hero in the Nats' attack. He was Rick Ferrell who continually kept the Washington Club in the ball game with his extra-base hitting against Newsome in the early innings. With a triple that scored two mates in the fourth he kept the Nats within striking distance and when there was a crying need for runs two innings later, he lashed out a double that scored two more.

Bucky Harris was forced to send four pitchers into the game before it reached a satisfactory ending. Elon Hogsett was no success and he was hauled out for a pinch hitter in the third.

Joe Kohlman gave up two runs in the sixth and a pinch hitter was deemed more valuable than his presence. Monte Weaver saw the Nats safely through the seventh and eighth and Ray Phebus nursed Washington's two-run lead nicely through the ninth.

Nats Slow in Starting.

The Browns had four runs before the Nats could get around to scoring. Three singles and a walk netted a pair in the first inning and then in the third Sammy West and Red Kress, two former Washington employes, slugged two more runs across the plate with a pair of lusty doubles. West slammed one of Hogsett's pitches against the centerfield fence and Kress lined one into rightfield.

Buddy Lewis jarred the grin off Newsom's face with a terrific home-run drive over the rightfield wall in the third with two out and none on base, and in the next inning the Nats got into the ball game, thanks to Rick Ferrell.

Finding Travis and Myer on base, Ferrell lined a three-bagger to deep leftfield, scored 'em both and cut the Browns' margin to 4-3.

It was 6-3 in the sixth when the Browns reached Kohlman for a pair of runs. West singled and Kress delivered a long triple over Almada's head, scoring a bit later on an infield out.

In the same inning, Ferrell put the Nats back in the game again. After Stone popped a lucky double into centerfield that Kress failed to hold, and Myer walked with two out, along came the younger Ferrell with a two-bagger against the centerfield wall and the Browns' lead was cut to 6-5. When Pinch Hitter Goose Goslin and Almada drew walks to fill the bases, Newsom was waved out of the box and in came Tamulis to strike Buddy Lewis out.

Tigers Open Series With Griffs Today

Kelley and Poffenberger Are Mound Rivals.

Thirty-two-year-old Harry Kelley, who pitched a dozen years in the minor leagues before Connie Mack discovered his talents, will make his first start in a Washington uniform today.

Bought from Philadelphia last week, the curve-balling Kelley will take the mound against Detroit's Tigers, who open a two-day invasion of Griffith Stadium. A shortage of pitchers has prompted Manager Bucky Harris to give Kelley a starting assignment.

The Tigers, looking strangely unfamiliar as a sixth-place club, have been troubled by the failure of Hank Greenburg, Charley Gehringer and Rudy York, to strike their hitting stride. Manager Mickey Cochrane is expected to send "Boots" Poffenberger, fast-balling right hander, to the mound.

When they acquired their seventh straight victory yesterday, the Nats achieved their longest winning streak since the pennant-winning season of 1933. In that year, Joe Cronin's club had three 10-game winning streaks.

Buddy Lewis, who has exhausted his supply of bats and is awaiting a new shipment from the factory, stroked his over-the-wall homer yesterday with a Rick Ferrell model, which is the type most similar to his own.

Pompoon Ranks as Favorite in Dixie Stakes Today

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., May 10.—Pompoon, No. 1 chaser of War Admiral last year, was installed a slight overnight favorite at odds of 3-to-1 for tomorrow's thirty-fourth renewal of the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap, second only to the Preakness as the high point of Maryland's spring racing session.

Despite the fact that he has not been to the post since he was third to Stagehand and Seabiscuit in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap last March, Pompoon has impressed with his training performances and appears to have overcome leg handicap that shortened his stand as a 3-year-old.

Opposed to the speedy son of Pompey, who lost the Preakness to War Admiral by a head over this track in 1937, will be eleven of the best stake horses in training, leaving out, of course, Seabiscuit and War Admiral. The pair most feared by Pompoon backers and either of whom may supplant the overnight choice as the favorite before post time are John A. Manfuso's Aneroid and Shandon Farm's Burning Star.

135 Starters Listed In Annual Golf Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Boasting an all-star field of local amateur golfers and a sprinkling of out-of-town entries, the twenty-eighth annual Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament will get under way today with the 135 starters playing an 18-hole qualifying round.

In the favorites role is the defending champion, Levi Yoder, who added the Washington tournament to his numerous titles last week, while a number of other fine players, including the chief foreign threat, last year's finalist, Frank Allan, are well liked.

The practice-round pace-setter yesterday was the former National Public Links ace, Claude Rippy, who defied the high winds to record a 72, three strokes over par, but a score that would likely stand up for the medalist honors.

Allan, playing with the host pro, Bob Barnett; Ralph Quinter and Ralph Fowler was 75, with Quinter a stroke higher.

Six former champions will again try their luck for the trophy given by President Taft, including Yoder and Quinter, only man to win the event three consecutive years, Miller B. Stevinson, D. Clark Corcoran and R. L. Finkenstaedt, of Cleveland.

The unanimous comment of the players after finishing practice rounds yesterday and Monday is that the course is in the finest shape possible, and would vie with any in the country at the present time.

The entry list is packed with golfers possessing the strokes to win the event, including Volney Burnett, Kenwood ace; Page Hufty and Reeve Lewis, of the host club; Rippy and Parker Nolan, of Congressional; Martin McCarthy, Beaver Dam; several Baltimore stars and many others.

The consensus of opinion is that last year's 71 by Johnny Burke that won the medal honors would again stand up if shot tomorrow, while the qualifying figure for the championship flight should hinge at 77.

Match-play rounds in the five flights will follow on Thursday and Friday, with the finals Friday afternoon.

Hillendale Has Handicap Play Today

An 18-hole medal play handicap tournament will be played today over the Hillendale course, under the auspices of the Maryland State Golf Association.

All players holding M. S. G. A. handicap cards will be eligible. Prizes will be awarded in three classes. The winners in the low gross and net of "Maryland State Golfers Handicap Week" will also compete.

Congressional Club Teams Move Ahead

Congressional Club's second and third teams moved into the lead in the District Women's Golf Association team matches yesterday, while in the first team play Indian Spring doubled the score on Chevy Chase, 6 to 3, and moved further ahead in their series of five dual matches.

Congressional's second team entry, playing over its own course, trounced Chevy Chase 7½ to 1½ and moved in front with 27½ points. Columbia, in second place with 25, downed Washington, 7 to 2, while Army and Navy defeated the defending champion Beaver Dam team and went into third place with 23½ points. Manor, 5½ to 3½ winner over Woodmont, is in fourth place with 20 points.

The third team play found Congressional's team scoring 7½ to 1½ over Manor at Indian Spring and leading the race with 19½ points. Kenwood, only a 5-4 winner over Chevy Chase, moved into the runner-up spot with one less point, while the hosts drew a bye, but remained in the third position with 17½. Columbia lost, 5-4, to Army and Navy in the other match, but still top their opponents by a half point in the totals, with 16½ to 16.

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt again defeated the Indian Spring first twosome, Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, by a 2 to 1 margin, but Mrs. Walter Stokes shot an 81 as she and Marion Brown won 3 points and Ellen Kincaid and Mrs. K. S. Giles clinched the victory by recording two points. Indian Spring now has 11½ points to Chevy Chase's 5½.

Landon's Netters Defeat Gonzaga

Landon defeated Gonzaga, 5-0, yesterday in a prep school tennis league match played on the Landon courts. Perkins started the winners off on the right foot by downing Smith, 6-3, 6-1, in two straight singles sets and then paired with Dorian to win over Smith and Sheehan, 7-5, 6-2.

Dorian won from Sheehan in the singles, 6-1, 6-4. Lincoln and Adams, after Lincoln had stopped Goers, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, rounded out a perfect day for the Landon racquet wielders by winning a doubles set from Walsh and Goers, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1.

G. W. Frosh Net Team Beats Albans

The spirit of wanderlust gripped a pair of George Washington freshmen racqueters yesterday and their teammates consequently dropped a 5-4 decision to St. Albans.

Arriving at the final match stalemated at 4-4, the Colonials were nonplussed to find their third doubles team missing. The unnamed players wandered off, it developed, after playing singles. Their absence clinched St. Albans victory for G. W. was obliged to default.

Singles.

Johnson (G. W.) defeated Wilmer, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2; Cowan (St. A.) defeated Blanken, 6—4, 6—1; Pope (G. W.) defeated Chewning, 6—2, 5—7, 6—3; Rothe (St. A.) defeated Clark, 6—0, 6—4; Finkenstaedt (St. A.) defeated Fretz, 6—3, 6—2; La Salle (G. W.) defeated Cooper, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Doubles.

Johnson and Blanken (G. W.) defeated Wilmer and Rothe, 6—0, 10—8; Cowan and Chewning (St. A.) defeated Pope and Fretz, 8—6, 6—4; Finkenstaedt and Cooper (St. A.) won by default.

U. S. Golfers Are Confident Of Retaining Trophy Abroad

Eight of the Nation's Greatest Amateur Stars Sail for England—to Play in British Amateur.

New York, May 10.—Uncle Sam's youngest Walker Cup team packed its bags and headed for England tonight confident to a man it would retain the cup emblematic of international golf team supremacy and possibly bring back the British Amateur championship.

Led by the veteran Francis Ouimet, non-playing captain, eight of the Nation's greatest amateur stars assembled for the Odyssey. They were Johnny Goodman, Johnny Fischer, Charlies Yates, Fred Haas, Ray Billows, Charles Kocsis, Reynolds Smith and Marvin (Bud) Ward. The two team alternates, Tommy Tailer and Don Moe, figured they would be just wasting their time under any circumstances and did not go.

Capt. Ouimet was optimistic over the prospects of retaining the cup that never had been taken away from the American team. "We'll be meeting some strange golfers as I understand the British have shaken up their team," he said, "but all the boys have been playing fine golf over here and I think we can keep up our winning streak."

Every player excepting Haas was in fine physical condition and even Haas' injury didn't bother his golf swing. Before he left New Orleans, Freddie was poked in the left cheek by a woman's parasol. An infection developed and an operation was performed to check the poison. Beyond a big patch over the wound, he appeared none the worse for his injury.

Though Capt. Ouimet refused to guess how he would line his team up for the doubles and singles at St. Andrews, June 3 and 4, Goodman, Ward, Fischer and Billows were regarded as sure competitors in both events. Those four have been burning up the courses on this side in practice.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

The two outstanding heroes in the Nats' triumph of yesterday—Zeke Bonura and Rick Ferrell—share equally in the award of points, the bulk of which goes to this pair.

To Bonura, four points, because it was his clean hit with two out and the bases full in the eighth inning that at once saved the ball game and won it.

To Ferrell, four points, because without his hitting the Nats would have been badly outdistanced, because he drove in two runs with a three-bagger and two more with a double.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because his home run high over the right-field fence started the Nats' scoring and because it was one of the finest hits of the season.

To Mel Almada, one point, because his single in the eighth inning with two out put the tying run on base and because he stole second cleverly to put the tying run in scoring position.

Sarron Due in Capital Today To Start Training for Gevinson

Principals in Forthcoming Fistic Encounter at Griffith Stadium Will Work in Huron Gym.

Petey Sarron is due in town today and the profuse exchange of long distance blurbs about who's going to do what to whom when he faces Lou Gevinson next week at the ball park appears definitely at an end.

Both men can be counted on for more statements, which will be carefully prepared by their managers, but with public workouts scheduled they will be meaningless, for the customers can have a look and form their own private opinions.

The Southern Syrian comes here from the Big Smokies of North Carolina, where he loitered a few days to strengthen his legs and improve his wind. He is reported in excellent physical condition and ready to don the gloves but may defer gym work a day or two.

If Petey does decide to labor today it will be at the Huron Gym, where headquarters will be established until the troupe is able to move into Turner's Arena. Public workouts of both fighters are scheduled for the Arena.

Gevinson, meanwhile, is advertising for sparring partners after belting out three newcomers in the gym yesterday and losing their services immediately after. Frankie DeAngelo, whom Sarron outpointed when he first invaded this territory, is working with the Southwest lad, and is the only one to escape damage thus far.

Gevinson looks fit enough to fight a herd of bull elephants at this writing, and is punching as well with his right as an orthodox battler. His boxing, however, leaves something to be desired, and will have to be polished up if he hopes to whip the seasoned campaigner. The Jewish boy is confident of winning, however, and regards Sarron as a stepping stone to bigger things in the fight business.

Gevinson, meanwhile, rules a slight favorite, financially and sentimentally, with most of the fans leaning toward the belief that his southpaw punches will rock Sarron, at least, and possibly put him on the deck. Sarron, however, does not lack support, especially from Alexandria—his adopted hometown, and several sizeable wads of currency will be staked on him.

Western Linksmen Beat St. John's

Western defeated the golf team from St. Johns, 7-2, on the Georgetown Prep links yesterday. George Vass and Bob Brown were low scorers with 74 apiece.

Brown, Western, won over Sullivan, 2-1; Rehkopt, St. Johns, defeated Kemon, 4-3. Best ball was Western, 2-1. Vass triumphed over Downey, 7-6, while Gordon, St. Johns, trimmed McLachlen, 1 up. Best ball, Western, 4-3. Maloney downed Regan, 1 up, and King defeated Kelly, 2-1. Best ball, Western, 1 up.

Devitt Linksmen Defeat Anacostia

Joe Kahn set the pace yesterday as Devitt Prep's linksmen scored a 4-to-2 victory over Anacostia High School in a match played at the Washington Golf and Country Club. Bagent, Devitt, clinched honors for his team by nosing out Smith, 1 up.

Kahn (D.) defeated Clements, 4 and 3; Andrews (D.) defeated Tawney, 5 and 4; best ball, Devitt, 4 and 3. Placos (A.) defeated Perris, 6 and 5; Bagent (D.) defeated Smith, 1 up; best ball, Anacostia, 4 and 3.

Hypocrite Outruns Bull Whip in 2 Horse Race at Pimlico

Walter Haight

It is unthinkable now that there was once a time when women were barred from the paddock at Pimlico; that they were not allowed to place their own bets nor even allowed to smoke on the Maryland Jockey Club grounds.

HAIGHT.

Rules and regulations of that kind would start a small track revolution today, when women are not only race fans but are steadily making places for themselves behind the scenes in racing. Feminine betters are equal in number to men. The names of more women stable-owners are added each season to the already imposing list of women who race under their own colors. Even closer to the sport are the, as yet not so numerous, women trainers who are on the job early and late schooling horses and giving orders to stable boys, grooms and jockeys.

Mortimer M. Mahony, manager of pari-mutuels at Pimlico race course, heartily approves of the new freedom of women at the races. Officially he says that they are good customers. They're agreeable to deal with; they bet conservatively but intelligently and more important—they are good losers. Personally, Mr. Mahony thinks that women in their gay costumes are colorful additions to the crowd.

In many years of association with the races, Mr. Mahony has met many interesting personalities, many of whom have been women. One of these, the "lady in black," was a high-stake player who frequented New York State tracks many years ago. She never played less than $2,000 or $3,000 a race and never talked to anyone but Mr. Mahony. He was often asked to introduce her to other curious fans, but he refused to reveal her identity even after she had died. Only last year Mr. Mahony and his mutuel clerks were intrigued by a woman better who played heavily at New England tracks. Every day she came supplied with a set of little white envelopes, which she opened one by one. She was one of the first to place her bet before each race and she became a familiar figure at the tracks, although she remained the mystery woman with the little white envelopes throughout the racing season.

No mystery woman has haunted Pimlico yet, but with a greater number of women coming to the track there is no knowing when one will turn up. Matt Daiger, veteran secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, has been watching the steady increase of women fans with interest. He remembers well the days when there were only a handful of women spectators. He has often sent an usher into the grandstand to request that a lady put out her cigarette and tactfully has given the same order to clubhouse guests.

Mr. Daiger says that one of the first concessions to women race fans at Pimlico was a ladies' betting booth upstairs in the little clubhouse. With that opening wedge women soon found the way to the betting ring and eventually to the paddock, which had also been closed to them, of course.

$2,500 Added Survivor Draws Only 2 Horses; Pays No Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 10.—With the mutuel department getting a "breather" the Maryland Jockey Club staged its own "match race" and it proved only a jog for Hypocrite, speedy son of Wrack, running in the colors of Ral Parr, Maryland sportsman. Bull Whip, from the Brandywine Stable, was doing a bit of huffing and puffing 10 lenghts behind at the finish.

The race was the Survivor Stakes, $2,500 added, which generally has been used as a final prep for the Preakness. Today's foes, eligible in Saturday's classic, were the only survivors of 39 ominations made last February 15. When only two accepted the issue, the Jockey Club let them run for the purse but put an eighth race on the program for wagering purposes.

For slightly more than a half mile, the race was a contest. Bull Whip, restrained by Jockey Harry Richards, and Hypocrite, retarded by Jockey Al Shelhamer, kept within a neck of each other with the former in front. Hypocrite, running on the outside, was asked for real speed for the first time on leaving the backstretch. He left Bull Whip as if the latter were tied to the fence.

Richards went to the whip in order to keep his mount in the running, but Hypocrite simply pulled away. Even at ten lengths, Shelhamer seemed to be in a charitable mood for Hypocrite was under a grip crossing the line.

Those in the crowd of 10,000 who wagered did so with friends.

The time of 1:46 3-5 was over that recorded by both horses in winning races here last week.

The Shandon Farms veteran Evergold, paying a $7.30 mutuel, won the eighth race coming from off the pace of Sun Antioch to score by a length and a half. Black Falcon was third. Mel Lewis rode the 9-year-old.

The eighth was an added event after the day's feature, the Survivor Stakes, developed into a match race.

Braving Danger's backers were ready to tear up their tickets with the seventh race half over. The A. C. Compton plater was a distant last and headed only f.. a night's sleep. However, Jockey Al Shelhamer urged him into action and at the wire he was the winner by a half length over Bewitched with Sea Gull third. Braving Danger's backers collected $9 for a deuce.

Hypocrite Wins 2-Horse Pimlico Feature by 10 Lengths

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Ral Parr's Hypocrite is shown winning the $2,500 Survivor Handicap at Pimlico yesterday by a good ten lengths over Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip, only other horse entered. Both are Preakness candidates. The mutuels were closed.

Dear Al: Selections at Pimlico.

Fred Colewill, who rode Blockade to a new record in the Maryland Hunt Cup this spring, added the Breakfast Club Stakes to his list of triumphs here this morning. Astride J. W. Y. Martin's Ronille, Colewill led the field home by a good sixteenth of a mile after having a lead that varied from 20 to 30 lengths. Ronille got to the front the first time around and stayed there throughout the four-miler. Champfleury, with Hugh O'Donovan up, was second and Tapet, ridden by Sidney Watters, jr., was third. It is reported that Marine Maid was scratched because the route was too short. All kidding aside, Marine Maid is going to make the grade one of these days in the mud. Until then, I pass. Trainer Tommy Raylor sent word from New York that he would be on hand Saturday to saddle Myron Selznick's Preakness candidate, Can't Wait. Taylor went to New York directly after his colt fulfilled his engagement in the Kentucky Derby. George Woolf, one of America's best money riders, is en route from Louisville, Ky., to pilot J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon in tomorrow's renewal of the Dixie. Bobby Merritt, now a resident of this State, arrived from New York to ride Mrs. Louise Viau's Rex Flag in the Dixie. He was accompanied by Agent Freddie Kreiger, former boxer of Baltimore. Preston M. Burch, trainer of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's horses, and Jockey Harry Richards returned from New York, where they went last Saturday. Jockey Sterling Young, who was injured during the recent Havre de Grace meeting, is still confined to the Havre de Grace Hospital. However, Young is hobbling about on crutches. The Maryland Jockey Club's annual yearling show will be held at 11 a. m. Thursday on the clubhouse lawn, instead of in the center field. Prizes donated by the management of the Bowie and Havre de Grace tracks, as well as the host organization, will be presented the successful breeders. BILL.

First race—Ladino, despite top weight of 121 pounds, deserves the call in the day's opener. Likes the short sprint route and appears to have an edge over Trigane. The latter has plenty of speed. Fredalva is in rare form now and despite cheapness, should be an important factor.

Second race—Bread King and Bally Bay got in action here with identical 121-pound assignments and with apprentice riders. Both are at best form and I prefer them in the order named. Count Dean to take care of the others.

Third race—Aglow, winner by three lengths last out, appears nicely suited by conditions here. Saparoo is better than generally rated and has a chance to cop it all. Lady Maryland for the show end.

Fourth race—Sun Alexandria carries a load to the post, but has some class and I'm going to try to make this one take the measure of Happy Code. The latter has done everything asked hereabouts. Red Pepper, top weight of the field, should take a squint at the money.

Fifth race—I'm forced to string along with Anerold in the Dixie. The Porter's son has come along nicely since returning from the West. When ready, he can give any man's horse a fit. He's set in my book. Snark comes here from a brilliant workout in New York. Mighty dangerous, despite the high weight. Mosawire for third money. This one is in too light to be disregarded. Burning Star seems a trifle outweighted and Pompoon may need a race. That's how I see it, anyway.

Sixth race—Red Jack gets a chance to do his stuff over a distance. Believed to be a Derby colt at the start of the season, he failed to win in sprints. Turkish Brand and Camaraderie for the place and show.

Seventh race—Chase Him will be a long shot in this cheap field, but has enough closing ability to win. River Dee and Hi-Blaze to take care of the minor awards.

Best bet—Aglow.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR RUNNER, $5.40, $3.80, $3.00; ROSE BABY, $6.70, $4.50; BALLOTER, $13.40.

STAR RUNNER, close up and running on outside in opening furlong, ran out at stretch turn while pressing LICKETYSPLIT'S pace and rallied when straightened out to open a gap. ROSE BABY, off poorly and forced to race in tight quarters, closed with good energy. BALLOTER lacked early speed, improved his position steadily and closed full of run.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Maryland bred. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:04. Winner, M. Neusteiter's br. f. (3), by Phillip—French Doll. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORIS RENE, $5.80, $3.10, $2.80; TROLIGHT, $3.30, $2.80; GREEN WATER, $7.70.

DORIS RENE, forward factor from break, moved up steadily on outside and came willingly for final test under strong handling. TROLIGHT, probably best, was shuffled back at start, gained steadily and closed with a bold rush. GREEN WATER was in thick of contention to show good effort.

Daily Double, Star Runner and Doris Rene, Paid $29.40.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:33½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MR. BUN, $13.00, $7.90, $5.10; SHARP THOUGHTS, $12.40, $7.10; DEFLATE, $3.50.

MR. BUN, distant trailer to the three-furlong pole, swung to outside to make move and under intermittent punishment, won going away. SHARP THOUGHTS saved ground to better position swinging for stretch, was partially blocked by DEFLATE and closed gamely. DEFLATE shook off BALCONY to get to front, disposed of TRACTABLE and was inclined to swerve while tiring in stretch.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01½. Off 4:02. Winner, Mrs. C. Lavery's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORKING GIRL, $69.60, $34.20, $26.10; JOBAKHETA, $34.50, $21.10; MAY MUSIC, $36.60.

WORKING GIRL, first away, was rated along behind HALO and GOLDEN KEY to turn, took command with bold move, opened a lead and held on gamely in closing test. JOBAKHETA worked his way up on outside and came with good energy. MAY MUSIC, forced to race in close quarters to turn, moved up menacingly and fought it out willingly.

Central Nine Whips Anacostia by 30-6

Rozelle Fans Seven But Central's Bats Turn the Trick in 'Indian Massacre' Fashion.

In one of the greatest exhibitions of batting power displayed by an Inter-High team this season, Central High School's baseball nine walloped Anacostia High, 30 to 6, in a seven-inning massacre played at Central Stadium yesterday.

Behind the great pitching of little Dicky Rozelle, who fanned seven and only allowed two hits, Central, which had been holding down the cellar position along with Anacostia, slammed out 21 safe blows to leave the Indians in undisputed possession of last place.

Coach Ray's charges scored in every inning, and during the first, third and fifth frames the entire Central team batted around in order. The Mount Pleasant aggregation, from this showing, will be considered the team Eastern will have to beat before the Lincoln Parkers move along in defense of its Inter-High crown.

Arthur Faircloth then tried to call a halt to the track meet, but the bats of the Mount Pleasanters kept booming. Seven more markers were added in the fifth and the sixth saw four more Central players race home to make a grand total of 30.

Central blasted two Indian hurlers from the mound and were treating the third just as roughly when the coaches agreed to a seven-inning tilt. Jack Burroughs, the first to face a hungry bunch of base-hit lads, was nipped for nine tallies in the first two frames. He was relieved by Tom Hutchinson, but Tommy had a miserable time of it and before he could retire three men, nine Central runs had scampered across the plate.

Roosevelt Defeats Briarley Team, 9-3

Smashing out 17 base hits while Bauer was keeping the 6 enemy hits well scattered, Roosevelt High School downed Briarley Military Academy, 9-3, on the field at Amendale yesterday.

Sylvan Stein, Rough Rider's first baseman, led the batting attack by getting four hits in five trips to the plate. Hymie Perlo whacked out three safe blows. Cooper, Cadet pitcher, was the slugging star for the losers.

Charlotte Hall Bows To Montgomery Blair

With Dick Sills leading the 13-hit batting attack by smashing out two home runs, Montgomery Blair High School's nine tripped Charlotte Hall Military Academy yesterday, 14-6, on the diamond at Silver Spring.

Brew, Blair's catcher, had a triple and two singles to his credit, while Orrison rifled out two doubles to create enough damage to sew up the game in the fifth. Slaughter, Charlotte Hall second sacker, also hit for the circuit to lead his mates in the hitting department.

Tech Is Beaten By Little Hoyas

Benny Zajac's homer with the bases loaded in the second was enough, as things turned out, to carry the Georgetown Frosh to a well earned victory over Tech's diamonders yesterday on the Georgetown field. The final score was 11 to 7 in favor of the freshmen.

Bill Wixted struck out 11 of the McKinley lads, but the going in several of the frames was not so easy. Coach Bruce Kessler's lads made eight hits, and the hits really counted, as they shoved across seven runs. Lou Mostow, crack Tech centerfielder, smacked out three hits, to take the batting honors for the day.

Mt. Rainier Beats National Training

George Green, Mount Rainier flinger, fanned 11, only walked two and allowed but five hits as the Mount Rainier High School nine won a 9-to-2 victory over the National Training School team yesterday on the Mount's home field.

Joe Ager led the winners with the willow by slamming out four hits in five times at bat. Every man on the team made at least one hit in the 16-hit attack except Jimmy Green. Johnson was the star for the losers by walloping a triple and later scoring for 1 of the visitors' runs.

Sports Postcripts

Was Freddy Mesmer, the G. U. basketball coach, embarrassed at a night spot the other night when someone suggested that he sing "Sons of Georgetown?" . . . Maryland University seems to thrive on field days . . . several weeks ago in the inaugural of a heavy and varied Saturday afternoon series at College Park, the Terps won every event . . . And again Saturday in their twenty-first annual field day they again swept the competition aside with three varsity and a freshman victories . . . It seems a shame that Don Dunlap, one of the most promising catchers developed in recent years by Central High, is surrounded by the miserable lot of players that form W. and L.'s current nine . . . Don, a good hitter and receiver in his scholastic days, was rated an excellent collegiate prospect and justified the rating in his freshman year with the Generals . . . But Saturday against Maryland he appeared to have contracted the slovenly and spiritless play of his mates who have yet to win a game this season . . .

The Hoya, Georgetown's student publication, has one of the better collegiate sport sections in the East . . . Two of the Hilltoppers' well-known athletes, John Riofski and Thomas Gildea, jr., are on the sports staff, while a third, Hugh Spalding, is university editor . . . Two of the better college nines in the South and in the country as well can be seen at College Park this week when North Carolina invades Friday and Duke follows on Saturday . . . Duke is the team that Terp Coach Shipley terms "a first class B minor league outfit" . . . The Blue Devils, incidentally, are loaded with what scouts call sure-fire big league timber . . . Though Maryland decisively whipped Georgetown in their first baseball meeting this season, the Hoyas again will be heavy favorites when they square off in June.

The three 1-hit games thrown in the National League last season were all by Western pitchers . . . The gentlemen were Lefty Grissom, Reds; Tex Carleton, Cubs, and Ray Harrell, Cards . . . What has happened to Cy Blanton, Pittsburgh's junior right-hander, who in his freshman year was the most effective hurler in his circuit? . . . He hasn't gone the route this season.

The husky (240-pounds on the hoof) Greek, who acquired a healthy reputation as a golfer among film folk while campaigning on the coast, is paired with Jake Patterson in the semifinal. It is not exactly the kind of welcome George expected, but he figures to be in main bouts before long.

"I understand the boys are getting rough," he said, eyeing his little audience quizzically. "But if that's the case, you don't have to worry with me around. I'll have 'em back in line in short order."

There was nothing braggadocio about the statement, for George appears capable of fitting his words to action. True, he does look a trifle plump around the waistline, but he vows it makes no difference in his work, unless to improve it.

"That isn't fat," he said, "I just naturally got bigger while on the coast."

His head grew in proportion with his waistline, apparently, for he spent half the day shopping for a new chapeau, but to no avail. He found some of proper size, but rejected them because of their styles. He failed to locate the proper size-mode combination, and George is fastidious about clothes and personal appearance.

Zaharias doesn't know whether he's considered a villain or hero in the present mat set-up, although he wins the majority of his bouts.

"I don't get rough unless the other fellow wants to," he admitted. "But I don't take anything off these guys, and if this fellow I'm wrestling Thursday night tries any monkey business I guess you'll just have to call me a villain, because I'll let him have it." George plays golf with Wiffy Cox at Congressional today.

The feature bout, lest it be overlooked, involves Orville Brown and Bobby Bruns, who struggled to a 30-minute stalemate last week. Chief Thunderbird and Ivan Vacturoff are down for a 30-minute preliminary. The other two in this category include Boris Demitroff vs. Nick Ellich, and Bob Wendish vs. Ed King.

Wheat Prices Slip as Bumper Crops Loom

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10.—Increased selling pressure at the last today to prepare for expected big official crop estimates pulled Chicago wheat prices down approximately a cent a bushel. Government figures, received long after dealings here had ceased, put the 1938 probable domestic winter crop at 754,153,000 bushels, 4,153,000 bushels larger than had generally been guessed here in advance.

Preceding the late tumble, the market had risen ⅝ of a cent largely because of purchasing by traders who believed bumper crop prospects had been sufficiently allowed for. An opposite factor, however, was that export takings today from North America totaled less than 200,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼-⅞ under yesterday's finish, May 79⅝, July 77¾-⅞, corn unchanged to ¾ lower, May 57⅝, July 53⅝-¾, oats ¼ off to ⅛ up, rye showing ¼-¾ drop, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Cotton Lower; July 8.67 Cents

New York, May 10 (AP).—Early advances in cotton today in sympathy with steadier foreign markets were partly lost later under influence of May liquidation. July sold off from 8.76 to 8.67 and closed at the low. Final quotations were 4 points net lower to 3 higher.

The market opened higher on moderate foreign and trade buying and soon advanced to net gains of 5 to 9 points. May liquidation increased as 11 May notices circulated and as that month declined other months turned heavier.

April Gold Imports Total $71,236,453

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that gold imports for April totaled $71,236,453, compared with $52,947,452 for March. The import figure was far below the total for April last year, which was $215,824,506.

Silver imports for last month totaled $15,756,911 as against $14,440,409 for March.

Washington Trade Picks Up During April

But Business Here Is 6% Below Normal and 14% Under Year Ago.

New York, May 10.—Washington was one of a group of 56 cities in the country in which business stages an improvement of 4 per cent or more in April over March, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance Inc., New York and Detroit advertising concern. Business in Washington stood at 6 per cent below normal, a gain of 4 per cent over March when conditions were at -10 per cent under normal. The index for April, last year stood at 8 per cent above normal.

"Seasonal business activities brought improvement in the standings of 56 trading areas during April," the report states. "Twenty-seven of these areas had increases of 3 per cent or more. Spring conditions also assisted 19 other areas in maintaining their March rate of turnover. A decline was registered in the remaining 72 areas."

The national index dropped 1 per cent last month, bringing the general business standing to 38 per cent below normal. In April, 1937, business was at normal. The greatest April gains, with indexes improving 3 per cent or more over March, were registered in the following areas:

Son Follows Loree Quitting D. & H. Board

New York, May 10 (AP).—Col. J. Taber Loree, son of Leonor F. Loree, followed his father today out of the management of the Delaware & Hudson, controllling the Delaware & Hudson Railroad and the Hudson Coal Co.

The elder Loree, nearing 80, resigned a few weeks ago on account of ill health as president and chairman of the executive committee, after guiding the century-old rail and coal enterprise since 1907. The son, it was announced today in the annual shareholders' meeting, informed the management he was "unavailable for re-election" to the board of managers of the parent company or as vice president of the railroad.

The Market

Stocks Tire After Early Rally in Million-Share Trading; Bonds Advance.

New York, May 10.—Stocks moved forward and then closed irregularly lower on profit taking. Most of the interest was shown in the first hour or so, after which traders grew wary of their own shadows. United States Government bonds were firm. July wheat dropped three-eighths of a cent to 77⅛ cents a bushel, the market weakening on the good crop reports.

In view of the dullness of business and indications from current statistics and other information that production and distribution of goods probably still are losing ground, the rather firm tone of speculative markets can be given no ready explanation. The consensus in the financial district is that the stock market is trying to reach forward on a combination of speculation on the temporary stimulating effects of a renewal of high-power spending by the Government and a hunch that the bottom of the business depression has been passed.

Probably Will Spend.

As for spending, it looks as though Congress will come round to the President's way of weak economic thinking sufficiently to provide a few billions for pouring down a dry hole. Conceivably if enough money is available, accompanied by other devices calculated to produce a gamble for higher prices, the stock market might go ahead for a while on the inflation motive power. As for the hunch as to the passage of the depression's nadir, one guess is as good as another. Business reports do not show it, but that doesn't prove much one way or another.

Wall Street recalls the words of the late Dwight W. Morrow who once said that you never could tell when you were in a depression until after you had been in one for six months, and that you never knew you were out until six months after recovery had begun. Such observations and plenty of cushions filled with the time-honored maxims of the "darkest hour comes just before the dawn" variety may give much needed comfort to those who would despair of any recovery until a drastic change in the Administration's stand on business has taken place.

Slump in Prestige.

Another ray of hope for business and the markets may be found by optimists in the growing disillusionment abroad over the virtues of American economic planning. Countries which until recently have not taken the depression in this country too seriously now are waking up to the fact that it is a real one and that it is dragging Europe into a slump. In no foreign country, debt ridden and war ridden as most of them are, is the yearly deficit anywhere nearly so high as it is here and in none is unemployment at such astronomical figures. It is natural that the Administration's voice in European affairs won't carry far as foreigners open their eyes and view the mess made of our own economic affairs. On that score the deck for a new deal on social reform and economic planning here may be produced.

Stocks opened firm, ran up a way before noon and then had to absorb profit taking during the afternoon which clipped fractions to a point from the top prices reached earlier. Sales volume contracted on the setback, but the turnover exceeded a million shares for the best in several weeks. Most of the business took place on a rising market.

Tractions Move.

Traction stocks continued in demand and duplicated their previous day's gains. Some of the baking company shares were popular for a while. Airplane stocks were given a whirl, most of them touching new high prices. United States Rubber led its group 1 to 2 points higher. Oil, steel, railroad, motor and metal sections were none too heady at any time. Steel and Bethlehem lost a fraction. Chrysler and General Motors ruled a shade lower. Standard of California gave up a point. Ohio was steadier and Standard kept close to shore.

Chemicals were firm, dut du Pont was an exception, colored as it was with motor influence. Public utilities were a feature of the early market rise. When stocks were at their best the Sun's industrial average rose to its best level since the middle of March. American Radiator preferred dropped a dozen points on its first sale in four months. Austin Nichols prior A was good for more than 2 points on two sales. C. & O. preferred recovered 5 points. Celotex preferred jumped 6 points. Hercules Powder, United States Gypsum, Universal Leaf and a few other inactive issues advanced sharply on one or two sales.

Foreign Buying.

The pick-up in sales volume on the exchange on Friday and yesterday brought in some light buying on balance from Continental Europe. Houses with foreign connections reported that most interest was on the "buy" side, but the amount was small. At present foreign dealers are remaining on the sidelines awaiting future developments.

Belgas.

The higher discount rate of the National Bank of Belgium—it was lifted from 2 to 4 per cent—considerably decreased the attractiveness of the short side of the belga market and there was a considerable narrowing of discounts. The 90-day future was quoted at a discount equal to 14 per cent, while the 30-day future was at a discount equal on an annual basis to about 30 per cent. That suggested that the market expected devaluation of the belga within 30 days. The spot rate was maintained just under the gold point by the control authorities. Rates quoted for other continental currencies did not suggest early moves toward devaluation by other countries, but there was much discussion of the probability of action by Italy, which is placed at a disadvantage with France and which could use some devaluation profits" to pay something on the Ethiopian venture.

Delaware & Hudson.

The Delaware & Hudson management admitted at the stockholders' meeting that securities had been sold and the proceeds used to reduce bank loans. A vice president refused to say whether any of the D. & H. holdings of New York Central had been sold, but there is a general belief in Wall Street that another bloc has been disposed of. With the election of Mr. Nuelle as president of the Delaware & Hudson probably a new policy will be taken with regard to the investments, which were built up from the funds acquired through borrowing on the Hudson Coal Co.'s bonds and used for the purchase and sale of Wabash and Lehigh Valley.

Newspapers Advised For Insurance Ads

New York, May 10 (AP).—Clinton Davidson, vice president of Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., today told a luncheon of life insurance supervisors of New York City that big insurance companies could make more money by placing institutional advertising in newspapers rather than in magazines.

"Newspaper advertising," he said, "when done on a natoinal scale, enables the life insurance agent to make more money than is possible through magazine advertising. By advertising in newspapers, the life insurance companies can fit their copy to the specific locality and to the pocketbooks of the prospects living in those communities."

U. S. Steel Shipments A 5-Year April Low

New York, May 10 (AP).—The U. S. Steel Corporation reported April shipments of finished products at 501,972 tons, the lowest for that month since 1933, when the total was 335,321. The latest figure is a decrease of 70,227 from March this year and of 841,672 tons from April, 1937.

For 1938 through April shipments aggregated 2,067,216, compared with 5,041,685 in the like period last year, a decrease of 2,984,469.

N. Y. Exchange Halts Trading In Holding Unit

Court Decision Leaves Value of Pittsburgh United Com. in Doubt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—The New York Stock Exchange ordered today immediate suspension of trading in the common stock of the Pittsburgh United Corporation, whose assets consist chiefly of holdings of United States Steel Corporation common shares. The governing committee decided on the suspension, effective tomorrow, pending investigation whether a decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court would make valueless Pittsburgh United common.

The supreme court, according to Wall Street accounts of the decision, directed the liquidation of the United States Steel stock for benefit of Pittsburgh United preferred shareholders on a valuation basis for the steel stock as of the date of distribution. A lower court decision had fixed the valuation at $111.25 a share against the current market price of "big steel" common around 45. In question, exchange authorities said, was whether the distribution would leave anything for the common shareholders.

Pittsbur, United common closed today at $1.25 a share, off 25 cents. It has sold as high as $9.50 the last few years. The preferred stock jumped $2 to $57. Trading in both issues was small.

Outgrowth of an oil well supply business originating soon after the petroleum industry got its start at Oil City, Pa., around Civil War times, Pittsburgh United in 1930 transferred its properties to a United States Steel subsidiary for 108,402 shares of the parent steel company's stock.

The litigation has pivoted on an agreement made in 1932 for distribution pro-rata of the steel stock among preferred shareholders.

Proxy Fight For C. & O. Road Lacks Quorum

Stockholders' Meeting Is Again Adjourned, This Time to May 19.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 10.—Lack of a quorum of Chesapeake & Ohio common stockholders today forced adjournment of a stockholders meeting without election of a board of directors.

Election inspectors reported the lack of a quorum without specifying what proxies had been filed in behalf of the C. & O. management, which Robert R. Young is seeking to maintain in office.

A committee headed by Earle Baile, seeking the election of a new directorate on behalf of New York banking interests, withheld its proxies but presented some revocations of the management's proxies.

On Young's motion, the meeting was adjourned until May 19.

New Missouri Pacific Directors.

St. Louis, May 10 (AP).—Four new directors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad were elected today at the annual meeting of stockholders here. Eight new directors of a subsidiary, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway, were chosen at a meeting of stockholders in New Orleans.

These Prices Won't Buffalo You!

Bob Burns Says—

My dad use'to tell me that a fella can get used to anything —even tight shoes. He said if a fella is around anything long enough, it finally gets to be a part of him and he'd miss it if he had to do without it.

I knew an old fella down home who was always ailin'. Nobody at home could remember a time when the old man didn't have somethin' wrong with him. Everybody prescribed medicine for him and he took all of it.

Finally one morning he came into the doctor's office and his face was pale with fright. He said, "Doc, this is the first time in 40 years that I haven't had an ache or pain and I'm afraid somethin' is wrong with me."

I HAD TO LEAVE IT SOMEWHERE—AND HE HAD QUARRELED WITH VAL—
BUT WHY DID YOU LEAVE THE BODY OUTSIDE VAL STANNARD'S ROOMING HOUSE?
SO YOU THOUGHT HE'D BE ACCUSED OF THE CRIME!
I-I HAD TO DO SOMETHING—I-I GUESS I WAS EXCITED—I DIDN'T REALIZE WHAT I WAS DOING!
THAT'S ENOUGH—FOUR PEOPLE WITNESSED YOUR CONFESSION!
I DIDN'T MEAN TO DO IT—WE WERE STRUGGLING FOR THE GUN!
JUST LUCK—THE MOVIE TURNED THE TRICK!

W. C. Noble, 80, Well-Known Sculptor, Dies

William Clark Noble, 80, nationally known famous sculptor and painter, died of acute asthma last night at his home, 1630 Sixteenth street northwest.

Mr. Noble had been a ranking American sculptor for a half-century, attaining his first success in 1887. Since coming to Washington in 1923 he had figured prominently in lawsuits and was the center of a controversy here about his monument, "Womanhood of America," intended to have been set up here.

Born in Gardiner, Me., Mr. Noble was brought up by a grandfather, after his father, a ship captain, was lost at sea. He early showed interest in sculpture and when he was 22 went to Boston to study. He afterward worked in Newport, R. I., and in Boston.

Most of Mr. Noble's commissions were won in competition and his life ended with the record of having won 29 out of 32 competitions entered.

Among his more famous works are the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument at Newport, R. I., the statute of Robert Burns at Providence, R. I., the Brooks Memorial in the Church of the Incarnation in New York City and the statue of Gen. Porter in Van Cortlandt Park in New York City. He also constructed a model for a memorial to Maj. Pierre L'Enfant, designed for erection in Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Emilie Bleecker Noble; a son, William Clark Noble, jr., of New York City, and a brother, Henry Noble, also of New York.

1939 New York WORLD'S FAIR

Theme Buildings, "Trylon" and "Perisphere"

★ This is a historic exhibit which every man, woman and child must see! It's the first time in Washington, the very first time, in fact, in America, that these magnificent miniatures have been put on public view. The models were prepared especially by the U. S. Steel Co. for presentation to the President and they are being exhibited through the courtesy of the White House.

★ It is a fascinating presentation of the wonders of the World Fair Theme Building in miniature. The original Trylon Building stands seven hundred feet high. The Perisphere will be a 22-story building enclosed in a globe. These models give an interesting preview of the architectural simplicity of this ambitious project. It is something that all Washington will be talking about. Be the first to see it.
